Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Democratic leaders are looking to the primaries in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts tomorrow and the California primary next week to decide the fate of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for President.

The New York governor is now miles ahead of his rivals in the race despite the utmost efforts so far of the "stop Roosevelt" contingent headed by Al Smith, himself an aspirant to renomination at the hands of his party.

It is generally regarded a foregone conclusion that Roosevelt will carry the Pennsylvania and Smith the Massachusetts primary. Roosevelt seems likely to get all but about 15 of the 76 members of the Pennsylvania delegation and Smith all but about ten of the Massachusetts group.

May Settle Nomination.

Most Democratic leaders here, including those who are opposed to Roosevelt, incline to the opinion that if the governor should win more than the expected number of delegates in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts and then on top of that should carry the California primary next week his nomination would become a virtual certainty. The development of such strength taken in conjunction with his unbroken line of victories in the primaries up to date would indicate that he would have well over a majority of the convention on the first ballot. Inasmuch as Champ Clark in 1912 was the only candidate who, having won a majority of the delegates, failed to achieve the two-thirds of the convention requisite to the nomination, Democratic politicians are wont to regard a majority vote as the forerunner of victory.

On the other hand, if Roosevelt were to fare worse in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts than is expected and then lose California, where he is opposed by both Smith and Speaker Jack Garner, the effect would be to cloud the situation with uncertainty. The anti-Roosevelt leaders would be encouraged to believe that their movement had begun to make real headway and that the defeat of the governor had become well within the range of possibilities.

Hoover Starts Campaigning

Politicians of both parties attach much political significance to the sudden acceptance by President Hoover today of an invitation to address the governors' conference at Richmond on Wednesday. The appearance of the President at Richmond will have the effect of overshadowing the presence of Gov. Roosevelt, who is already in attendance on the conference and the most prominent figure therein.

The President denied himself to callers today while he worked on his speech, which will have to do with the relationship between the state and federal governments, taxes, and economy. The politicians surmise that the sudden decision of the President to accept this invitation was brought about by recent developments among them the success of the President in imposing his ideas of an omnibus economy bill upon the house special economy committee and the Roosevelt speech attacking the Hoover depression relief plan as favoring the rich at the expense of the poor man.

According to this view the President has seized the opportunity of answering Roosevelt to his face in the governor assembly and of exploiting himself as a champion of radical retrenchment of government expenditures, a rôle he only recently assumed after the Democratic leaders of the house had taken the initiative and were getting all the publicity.

Seen as Campaign Keynote.

Republican leaders are looking forward to the President's speech as a sort of keynote of the campaign Mr. Hoover will make for reelection, particularly if Roosevelt should be his opponent, in which event the Republicans will endeavor to make the issue the radicalism of the governor and his following.

Somewhat of a sensation was caused here today by the declaration of Charles M. Hay, Missouri's leading Democratic prohibitionist, in favor of resubmission of the prohibition amendment. Mr. Hay, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for senator from Missouri, told the National Woman's Democratic club that he is against submission of a repeal but would favor submission of a modification, reserving the right to oppose it when submitted.

CERMAK CALMS TEACHERS WHO ASK A PAY DAY

Sends Them Home in Happier Mood.

Tax Situation

Chicago and downstate legislators agree on bill to extend penalty date for taxes from May 1 to June 1.—Page 3.

Less than 102 millions of the 290 millions due in taxes have been paid to county treasurer.—Page 3.

Sixty school teachers marched in upon Mayor Cermak yesterday, prepared to ask for more pay days. But the mayor did what talking was done and the teachers trooped out at the end of the interview in good humor and apparently satisfied by the mayor's explanation of school finances.

The teachers were among the signers of a petition circulated at the Haughan and LeMoyne schools, protesting that the mayor had not fulfilled his promise that the teachers would get a pay day every time the city employés were paid.

$26,000,000 Already Loaned.

"Do you believe it is my duty to pay you?" Mayor Cermak asked the group. There was an affirmative murmur.

"Why not ask the president of the county board, or the governor of Illinois for your pay?" the mayor demanded. "My office is as foreign to the school board as theirs. I have loaned the school board $26,000,000 from city funds, which I had no business to do. That money would have paid city employés for the rest of the year.

"The school board refused to make the retrenchments demanded by the bankers. The banks said they would give money to pay for police and fire protection, but refused the teachers I said, 'All or none.'

Unable to Survey Schools.

"There was a survey made in the city hall and unnecessary positions were eliminated. I asked the school trustees to resign so that I could make a similar survey of the school board, but they all refused. I felt there were more employés over there, outside of the teachers, than were necessary."

"Tell us where they are spending money unnecessarily, and where the graft is," said one of the teachers. "You are criticizing us for something we don't know about."

"I am criticizing you for signing that petition," retorted Mayor Cermak. "I object to an insulting document. I wonder why another paragraph wasn't added to it, demanding that the mayor be hanged to the nearest lamp post. Why don't you parade to the school headquarters, where the trouble is, instead of to the city hall?"

Mayor Gives Swift Retort.

"We don't care where the money comes from," said another teacher. "We want our salaries."

"Haven't I helped you get all the money you got?" asked Mayor Cermak.

"It is my honest opinion," he continued, "that you will not work as many months in the next school year as you formerly did. My reason for saying this is that people are not paying their taxes. Many would like to pay now, because of the Supreme court decisions in the tax strike cases, but they haven't the money.

"The school board can retrench even though its budget has been passed. I did that in the city hall. Unless the school trustees live within their revenue, I don't know where the money is coming from to meet payrolls when schools reopen in the fall."

A Picnic—Not a War.

"It wasn't a war," commented one teacher as she left the mayor's office. "It was a picnic."

President Myers of the school board has arranged with Mayor Cermak, it was announced yesterday, to have a plentiful supply of the small denomination 1931 school tax warrants which the school board is exchanging for the scrip and "N. S. F." pay checks that were issued to its employés.

As soon as the city council approves the school budget for 1932, which will probably be this week, it was said, the city will accept 1932 school tax warrants from the board in place of the 1931 warrants which it has taken as security for pay advances to the schools.

THE REAL BEAR RAIDER

BANDIT HOLDS UP 4 THEATERS IN SUCCESSION

A lone bandit held up four south side moving picture theaters in less than an hour last night, getting a total of $170.

At 9:30 o'clock he menaced Miss Marie Morrin, 8915 Exchange avenue, cashier of the Avalon theater, 1651 East 79th street, and stole $15. This theater has been robbed several times in the last few months, the last time being a week ago.

Fifteen minutes later the gunman took $65 from Miss Naomi Jones, 1214 East 73d street, cashier of the Harvard theater, 6312 Harvard avenue. At 10 o'clock he appeared at the E. A. R. theater, 6839 Wentworth avenue, and forced Miss Anna O'Brien, 1422 East 71st place, the cashier, to hand over $40. His last robbery was at the Lynn theater, 1044 West 63d street, where he got $10 from James Stepanek, 6225 South Green street, the owner.

REVEAL BIRTH OF A BABY TO CAPONE SISTER

A baby girl weighing 8½ pounds was born on April 10 to Mrs. John Maritote, the former Mafalda Capone, sister of Al Capone, in the Mother Cabrini hospital, 1200 Gilpin place, it was learned yesterday. The baby was named Della Rosa, according to her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Theresa Capone, who was found at her home, 7244 Prairie avenue.

Mrs. Capone, smiling broadly and displaying several gold teeth, said the baby was "beautiful." The mother and child left the hospital last Thursday, she said, for Miami, Fla., where Al Capone's island estate is. They expect to stay there about two months, she said.

She denied reports that a bodyguard was placed in the hospital to guard the baby shortly after its birth. They were not afraid of kidnapers, she said.

2 of Extortion Gang, Victim Shot to Death

Taylorville, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Three extortionists armed with a sub-machine gun battled early this evening with two miners defending their home at Langleyville, three miles west of Taylorville, with shotguns. Two of the extortionists and one of the defenders were killed.

Peter De La Rocco, 40 years old, of Springfield, leader of the blackmail gang, and Henry Allegrucci, 55 years old, a miner, were killed in the shooting at the home. The second extortionist, Vincenzo Manteller, 40 years old, of Springfield, was fatally wounded. He died soon after he was found in the abandoned, bullet riddled car of the gang in Vandeveer street, Taylorville.

Search for De La Rocco.

The other man with De La Rocco and Manteller escaped on foot from the car. The city and state highway police were searching for De La Rocco late tonight. It is believed that a second car followed the one in which the blackmailers went to Langleyville. The highway police reported that it had been traced through several villages and into Springfield.

From the story of the attack and defense told by Arthur Cioni, the surviving defender, it was apparent that De La Rocco and Allegrucci fired simultaneously and that each killed the other.

Threatened with Death.

"Eight days ago," said Cioni, "De La Rocco came to me and demanded $1,800. I told him I didn't have it. He told me then that unless I paid it by Friday night he would see that I was killed.

"Maybe I would have paid him if I had the money. But the only thing I could figure out was to get ready and fight. Allegrucci lives with me and he agreed to help. We got our shotgun ready and we stood guard every night, beginning Friday.

"Tonight it was just getting dark when an automobile drove by. It was going slow and we could see out the window that the men in it were looking close at my place.

Gang Starts Shooting.

"All of a sudden one of them started shooting and bullets popped against the front of the house. Allegrucci jumped up and shot at the car. Then he fell over dead. A man—that was De La Rocco—tumbled out of the car into the dust.

"The machine gun fell out with him, but one of the other fellows jumped out and got that. I shot at them, too, and they drove away.

Mrs. Cioni and her 12 year old son, Arthur Jr., were in the house at the time of the shooting. County authorities said that Cioni and Allegrucci were respectable citizens and had never been mixed up in alcohol or other rackets.

It was suggested that De La Rocco and his gang might have been the killers of John Picco, Italian consul at Springfield, who was shot down near his home in Springfield on April 16.

SENATE PASSES $5,000 PAYMENT FOR RUM KILLING

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—The responsibility of the government for ruthless killings by dry agents was recognized today by the senate when it passed a bill to give Mrs. Selma Virkkula $5,000 to compensate for the death of her husband, Henry Virkkula, who was shot and killed by Border Patrolman Emmet J. White near International Falls, Minn., June 8, 1929.

The bill had previously passed the house and now requires only the President's signature in order to make the money available to the widow of the dry agent's victim.

Youths, Girls, Town Official Die in Crashes

Four Chicagoans, two of them young men and two of them young women, were killed last night in two separate automobile accidents. In another accident early this morning, Frank Cuchna, newly elected town collector for Cicero, was killed when his automobile was struck by a rapid transit train at 60th court and 22d street, Cicero.

Eugene Olson, 26 years old, 3726 Sheridan road, son of Walter E. Olson, president of the Olson Rug company, and Howard Black, 24 years old, 6255 Sheridan road, whose father is an official of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, were killed when Olson's car ran off a road and crashed into a tree five miles west of Elkhorn, Wis. Jack Pachal, 28 years old, 6158 Winthrop avenue, who was with them in the car, was injured.

At the Olson home last night it was said that Eugene, with Black and Pachal, had started to Madison, Wis., where all were formerly students at the University of Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Olson are now in Washington, D. C. Young Black's father, Howard Black Sr., of Ottawa, is western manager of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company.

Cicero Collector Killed.

Collector Cuchna lost his life when he drove in front of an east bound Douglas Park train. His automobile was dragged fifty feet and, after being wedged against a pole, burst into flames. Cuchna had been thrown clear of the wreckage, however.

The 60th court crossing is less than twenty feet from Cuchna's place of business, the Grand Furniture company. It is protected after midnight only by warning bells. They were working at the time of the accident. State Senator Richey Graham, Mayor Cermak's son-in-law, went to the Cuchna home after the accident. He said that Cuchna had advised him only a few hours before of the danger of the crossing. Cuchna was 42 years old and lived at 1928 South Austin boulevard, Cicero, with his wife, Rose, and daughter, Louise.

Two Young Women Killed.

Miss Helen Williams, 24 years old, 5514 Blackstone avenue, and Miss Virginia Estep, 25 years old, 9827 Prospect avenue, lost their lives when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into another at Mannheim and Roosevelt roads, Hillside.

The driver of the car in which the two young women were killed was Miss Frances Clapp, 21 years old, of Clinton, Ia., a senior at the University of Chicago and roommate of Miss Williams. The latter was a former student at the Midway institution.

Relatives of Miss Estep said that she and the other girls had met while they were all attending the Frances Shimer college at Mount Carroll, Ill. They had spent the week-end at the Clapp home in Clinton and were to spend a few days together at the Estep home.

The driver of the other car in the accident was Richard Kennealy, 31 years old, 442 Ashland avenue, Elgin. He was accompanied by his aunt, Miss Margaret Quinn, 36 years old, of Elgin. They were uninjured. Miss Clapp was cut and bruised.

Eight Deaths in County.

The deaths of two young women, Cuchna, and five others in Cook county yesterday raised the 1932 toll to 346. The other victims:

George Newbold, 15 year old Cary school boy. Killed by the car of Arthur Naylor, manager of John Hertz' Leona breeding farms along state highway No. 19. Two other cars forced Naylor off the road, witnesses said.

Miss Mary Dunne, 19 years old, 1749 West Roosevelt road. Died at the county hospital from a skull fracture incurred Feb. 24 when two cars collided on West Washington boulevard.

Thomas L. Donnelly, 1021 South 6th avenue, Maywood. Killed when his automobile was struck by the Portland Rose, Chicago and North Western flyer, at the Poplar avenue crossing in Elmhurst.

Savo Starigas, 57 years old, of 260 West 25th street. Died this morning in St. Luke's hospital. He was struck last Friday in Michigan avenue at Roosevelt road by an automobile driven by C. L. McAllister of 2124 North Clark street.

An unidentified woman about 45 years old. Killed when an automobile driven by William L. Jacobson, 50 years old, 1453 Hyde Park boulevard, struck her at Warren and Damen avenues. Jacobson, in an effort to avoid striking the woman, swerved his car so suddenly that it was overturned. He suffered a fractured skull and was taken to the county hospital.

William Houde, 38 years old, 1043 Clarence avenue, Oak Park, was killed, and Samuel Engel, 1311 South Lawndale avenue, was critically injured Sunday when a sedan driven by Charles Boyle of Oak Park struck their truck head-on near Salem, Wis.

LAWYERS CLOSE TESTIMONY IN MURDER TRIAL

Third Alienist Calls Lieutenant Sane.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
(Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.)

HONOLULU, April 25.—Both sides closed their evidence in the Fortescue-Massie murder trial at noon today and arguments for the jury will begin tomorrow morning. These will be unlimited, Circuit Judge Charles S. Davis informed the attorneys, but the case is expected to be submitted to the jury for a verdict by Wednesday night or Thursday morning.

Honolulu is divided in opinion as to what the verdict will be. Most residents believe that the result will be a mistrial. Others are of the opinion that there will be an acquittal. Very few think that the jury will bring in a conviction. All beliefs are based on guesswork, as no one knows just what can be expected because of the racial complexion of the jury.

How the verdict will be received by Hawaiian, naval and other circles is the subject of much discussion and some apprehension. No matter which way it goes, it will leave unsatisfied a large body of people. The evidence has clarified and explained the situation, but has left unchanged the basic reasons for social cleavage.

Alienist on Stand.

The final evidence today, a medical opinion by Dr. Joseph Catton of California, as to Lieut. Thomas H. Massie's mental condition at the time of the killing of Joseph Kahahawai at the home of Mrs. Granville Fortescue, the naval officer's mother-in-law, seemed to turn the balance of this legal issue in favor of the prosecution.

Dr. Catton, in common language, and without great straining of medical terms and theories, said that Massie was sane when he shot the Hawaiian, and that there was no evidence of insanity in any of his actions. He said he exhibited rather normal fight anger and fear flight reactions in the various situations shown in the record.

Dr. Catton, however, in building up a picture of Massie for the jury on which to give the basis for his opinion, painted again the details of the assault on Mrs. Massie and all the distressing things that happened to the young husband after that. His concise, effective summation made the tragedy relive in the minds of the jurors and spectators, and had Mrs. Fortescue sobbing aloud.

Defense Dealt Blow.

Such a fresh arousal of sympathy can hardly fail to aid the defense case, although the technical defense was dealt a heavy blow. The real defense remains—the justification for the killing which can only be pleaded in this indirect fashion but which is expected to be the turning point of opinion in the jury room.

Dr. Catton said there was no evidence of delirium, ambulatory automatism, amnesia, or chemical insanity, such as the defense alienists ascribed to Massie's act.

Dr. Catton emphasized several times the effect on Massie's mind of the rumors and belief of part of the population that his wife was never raped, that her story was untrue, and similar outputs of the gossip mills of Honolulu.

Still sane and normal, he said, Massie stepped out from his early behavior, which was to rest the case on law and order, and decided to act in his own behalf and to seek satisfaction beyond the law.

"Merely Showed Fright."

His actions after the killing when arrested merely showed fright, according to Dr. Catton, rather than any blank memory. He pictured Massie as aware at all times of what he was doing and as responsible for the results of his actions under the law.

The prosecution on this has made a good manslaughter case, if the jurors disregard all other thoughts about the case.

Dr. Robert Faus, city and county physician, was put on the stand again by the prosecution. Dr. Faus said Kahahawai probably retained consciousness for from three to five minutes after he was shot and died in fifteen or twenty minutes. He said it was reasonable to suppose that a man of Kahahawai's strength could struggle during the first few minutes.

Attorney Clarence Darrow, chief counsel of defense, brought out no evidence of a struggle in the room.

As the fourth week of the trial opened interest centered on the testimony of Dr. Catton, the California psychologist and alienist.

As he was the fifth mental expert in this case to attempt to explain the naval officer's condition at the time of the killing, he might be regarded as a sort of umpire. The evidence up until today balanced evenly, two testifying that he was sane and two regarding him as insane. The jurors appeared to be somewhat bored with this angle of the case.

Dr. Catton was placed on the stand at the beginning of the session and was examined by Barry Ulrich, assistant prosecutor. Dr. Catton testified that he is a lecturer in neurology and psychiatry at Leland Stanford and that he also teaches the legal aspect of medicine in such cases as this. He said he is in charge of all indigent mental cases in San Francisco and is a consultant on nervous and mental diseases for the United States' veterans' bureau. His testimony helped to convict Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd for the murder of two women. Ulrich lost little time in commencing the examination.

Did Not Examine Defendants.

"Have you examined any of the defendants in this case," he asked Dr. Catton.

"I have not," the doctor replied.

Ulrich brought out that the defense refused to permit an examination. Dr. Catton said he has read the testimony of Lieut. Massie and Mrs. Massie and that of the other alienists.

Q.—As a result of your study of the records, have you formed an opinion of the sanity of Lieut. Massie at the time of the killing? A.—I have.

Q.—Have you furnished a report to the attorney general?

Darrow objected.

"You have not furnished it to us," he said.

"I have no copy," said Dr. Catton.

"It's too late," said Darrow with unusual emphasis.

Recites Massie's History.

Q.—Give your opinion and reasons as to Lieut. Massie's condition at the time of the killing. A.—From the record I learned an adequate picture of the mental state of Lieut. Massie. As to past conditions, my opinion as to part of the makeup of Massie at that moment is written in a long series of facts. At the time of the killing he was 27. He was born in Kentucky, went to military schools, and is a graduate of Annapolis. He married a 16 year old girl in 1927. He has been traveling on naval assignments. For the last two years he has been here. It was his custom to go out socially. It was Mrs. Massie's custom, which he knew, not to be so anxious to go. She wanted to go home early. He would excuse her or allow her to go home. Such a party was held on Sept. 12.

Dr. Catton described the function in detail.

"Massie had a drink early and then another," the doctor said. "He danced twice with his wife and then saw her last upstairs in the inn with another party."

Darrow Objects to Testimony.

Darrow objected to this recital, arguing it had no bearing on the case. Ulrich turned to Darrow and reminded the 75 year old lawyer that all this was introduced by the defense to get the mental condition portrayed. The court permitted Dr. Catton to continue and the alienist told of Massie's search for his wife and how he finally found her at home in a state of collapse. Then, the doctor, related, she told the story of her rape and how the man she later identified as Kahahawai struck her.

"Kahahawai took this unfortunate woman into the bushes," he said, "struck her again and assaulted her while she prayed for mercy. She told her husband that Kahahawai knocked her teeth out and that her beads were lost."

At this point Mrs. Fortescue sobbed aloud, the first time she had lost control of herself to this extent in the courtroom. Massie comforted her. The witness went on with the story, describing Mrs. Massie's bruises and her care at the hospital, how Massie nursed her and became nervous, worried, tense and lost weight.

Same Picture as Defense.

This was precisely the picture which the defense painted as the cause of insanity. The trial of the accused rapists was held, with Massie in court at first and then absent because of naval duty, the witness said.

"Then he learned the jury had disagreed as to whether these were the assailants or whether any assault took place," Dr. Catton said, speaking rapidly. "Massie consulted many as to what might be done and conceived the idea of obtaining a confession from the accused. He said he felt for some time that he should kill Kahahawai. His naval training and the advice of Rear Admiral Yates Stirling Jr., commandant here, restrained him, but the rumors, persistent and prevalent, preyed on his mind that there had been no assault, that his wife was lying about it, and that navy men had done it.

"Massie and Mrs. Fortescue then discussed a plan for picking up Kahahawai and getting a statement. He got E. J. Lord and Albert O. Jones, two sailors, to help. These four met and made their plans the night before the killing. Mrs. Fortescue was to point out Kahahawai. A car was rented. Another meeting was held the morning of the killing. Massie brought his gun and threw it on the divan. It had been decided to use a loaded gun, for Massie's idea was to cock the gun to scare Kahahawai more. Jones brought his gun and Massie took it and placed it on a shelf.

Jurors Show Interest.

"Then they rented the car, faked a summons for arrest. A rope, tarpaulin and guns were available."

The jurors exhibited interest in all this although they had heard it all before.

"The picture of his wife praying as she was beaten by Kahahawai came to Massie," the doctor continued, "and then Massie remembered no more. At the time of his arrest Massie was pale, in the position of looking straight upward. He refused a drink and would not answer questions. He placed his hand over his face when an effort was made to take a photograph. He knew his name. He called a detective, 'Hello, big boy, haven't I seen you at the police station?' and accepted a cigaret and a light.

"He got out of the car when he was requested to do so, and refused to give an account of what he had done that morning. There is no evidence in his past life of a nervous, hereditary disease."

"No Brain Disease."

Q.—What, then, is your opinion? A.—First, based on the data reviewed, at the time of the killing, Massie was sane in a medical sense. There was no psychosis. There was no brain disease which prevented his ability to discern the nature of the criminal actions out of which came the killing. Massie's condition was such that he could orient himself with relation to the crime charged.

Asked to give the reasons for his opinion that Massie was mentally responsible, Dr. Catton said he believed that his wife's story and his close touch with her sufferings made him nervous and upset.

"Massie's instincts to anger and fight were brought into play," the witness continued. "He began to make his first move through the police and lawyers, seeking retaliation. As time went on Massie was as a sane man who loses weight, sleep, and strength and does not go out socially. He found that while his friends saw the way he did, others did not.

"He was driven first to law. A mistrial resulted. He was perplexed mentally that his theory that Kahahawai assaulted his wife was not the theory of the jury or the populace in general. Rather than his belief the idea was abroad that there was no assault."

Darrow Again Objects.

Darrow objected to this, and said the California doctor was unable to report the opinion of the populace.

"Massie believed," the doctor went on, "that some people believed he struck his wife himself or that Lieut. Branson, his companion at the party, was responsible, and it contrasted in his mind with his own belief that Kahahawai was the assailant. We find him acting sanely, normally, and rationally, and using good judgment.

"He believed he could not depend on the forces of law and order to work out the case as he believed it should be worked out. He was still sane. He chose himself as the agent to deal with Kahahawai rather than to leave the case with society. He began to act on that decision and considered kidnaping so as to get a statement from him. He felt he might kill Kahahawai. A new line satisfactory to Massie developed and he engaged in a transaction with Mrs. Fortescue, Jones, and Lord.

"His anger and fight mechanism was still in force. His fear and flight mechanisms were shown by the use of the rented car and the disguise which covered his face.

Find no Delirium.

"I see normal and sane reactions in the picture and not a single solitary evidence of insanity. I found no evidence of the presence of delirium, and found no evidence or suspicion of a period of automatism, nor any presence of epilepsy, alcoholism, intoxication, hysterical neurosis, or psychosis. There was no evidence of chemical insanity."

Dr. Catton leaned forward toward the jury in his earnestness and again Darrow came to his feet.

"I object," Darrow cried. "Let him act like any other witness. Why can't h sit in his chair? He might as well stand up and argue. He doesn't have to emphasize his remark. His actions are not those of an honest, impartial witness."

"Has he any right," flared Dr. Catton, turning to the judge, "to question my honesty? I resent it."

"All right, then resent it," said Darrow angrily.

Told to Stop Quarreling.

The court ordered the two to stop quarreling and apologies were soon in order, but Darrow was soon on his feet again arguing that the witness should not lecture the jury or argue the case, but should make a statement like an ordinary witness.

"I am not interested," Dr. Catton said. "I have tried not to offend."

Dr. Catton said that a part of speech comes out through the hand as well as the tongue and that no amnesia was found in Massie. He added that Massie had a complete comprehension of the transactions which led to the killing when he was picked up by the police.

"He knew his act was unlawful," he said, "because he became pale and was afraid."

Darrow Cross-examines.

There was no insanity, he declared, in that each one of his behaviors in the record indicates they were not the actions of an insane man but the actions of a man who is sane.

Ulrich sought to get an opinion that Massie fabricated symptoms of amnesia, but the court would not allow it.

Darrow cross-examined Dr. Catton.

Q.—Can you explain insanity? A.—I will try. Insanity is a condition in which, because of a disturbed function or structure of the forces of the brain, an individual is prevented from continuing the form of action which allows him to adjust himself to persons and things around him.

Darrow pressed this, and the witness said it is difficult to tell in "borderline cases." He admitted the killing was the result of a long series of causes.

Q.—Does a disturbed condition of the mind bring on a disturbance of the functions? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are you especially interested in this case? A.—I intended telling the medical facts and nothing else.

Q.—Can't you trust the lawyers to bring those out? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you believe that a man's actions are affected by substances in the blood? A.—Yes, on interrelation.

Q.—Do you know a man named Harlow who killed his wife and whom you testified was insane? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is it your opinion that Guiteau, the man who killed Garfield, was insane? A.—Yes.

The witness explained that Harlow had a long period of illness preceding the time when he found a man in bed with his wife.

Q.—He shot and killed her? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you testify he was insane? A.—Yes, I testified he was not responsible.

Not Swayed by Pay.

"When I give an opinion it doesn't have to go just one way to be paid," Dr. Catton said in an argument with Darrow.

"Do you mean that a lawyer would put you on the stand, not knowing how you would testify?" Darrow asked.

"It was almost that way in this case last Saturday," the doctor replied.

Dr. Faus then testified briefly and Judge Davis decided to have the arguments start tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and to give the instructions to the jury after the closing pleas.

ANSWER FILED IN SUPREME COURT TO CAPONE PLEA

Government Denies His Contentions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Counsel for the government today filed their brief with the Supreme court in answer to the brief, filed last week, in which attorneys for Al Capone asked the court to review the judgment in which District Judge James H. Wilkerson sentenced the gangster to eleven years in the penitentiary and to pay a $50,000 fine.

The government brief denied in detail the contentions made by Capone's lawyers. Technical in nature, the gist of the chief argument in Capone's behalf was that the indictment under which he was convicted of evasion of the income tax laws failed to set forth sufficient facts to inform him of the nature and cause of the accusations against him, as required by the constitution.

Refute Defense Arguments.

Solicitor General Thomas D. Thacher's answering brief contends that the counts of the indictment were sufficiently specific and cites precedents to show that facts which Capone's attorneys argue should have been set out in the indictment were properly matters to be proved in court.

"Petitioner's conduct," says the brief of the solicitor general, "raises a presumption that he was sufficiently informed of the particular attempt upon which the government would rely for conviction to enable him to prepare his defense."

And, the brief further points out, "He asked for no bill of particulars. It is fair to assume that had he done so, further particulars would have been supplied. Obviously, petitioner did not at that time consider the question of importance to his defense. He chose to gamble upon the verdict of the jury, undoubtedly hoping that should the jury find against him, the verdict would run afoul of the snare he had thus concealed."

Wilkerson Appointment Pends.

The fate of Judge Wilkerson's elevation to the Circuit Court of Appeals, which is closely linked to the Capone case, remained pending before the senate judiciary committee today. The committee, though in session, took no action on the recently returned subcommittee reports, which, by a vote of 3 to 2, decided in favor of Judge Wilkerson's elevation on the ground that his handling of the Capone case outweighed any unfavorable arguments concerning his labor injunction record. It is probable that the Wilkerson nomination will be taken up at next Monday's meeting of the committee.

OFFICIALS ALL DENY WHITE HOUSE LIMITS CAPONE JAIL GUESTS

Reports from Hopewell, N. J., and Washington last night that Al Capone had been refused any but the most "legitimate" visitors to his county jail cell, and that he is held virtually "incommunicado" on orders from the White House pending Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's decision "on Capone's offer to help him recover his son," brought the following comments from officials:

Assistant Attorney General George A. Youngquist in Washington: "I have nothing to say one way or the other. I have said nothing else but that."

Warden David Moneypenny of the county jail: "No new orders have reached me."

Deputy United States Marshal Edward A. King, who issues most of the Capone visitors permits: "My orders remain the same. This new report says that only Capone's family, his lawyers, and persons with sufficient and legitimate reasons may see him. Those have been the orders since he was put in jail. They haven't been changed."

Assistant United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, who countersigns the jail permits: "So far as I know, our orders remain the same."

The Hopewell reports emphasized the belief by some officials that Capone, if he has made offers, which he has denied, hopes, through them, to receive leniency from the government on his eleven year sentence for income tax evasion.

RECTOR'S TRAIL OF LINDBERGH'S BABY A FAILURE

Discredited by the Authorities.

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—The search for the 22 month old son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who was kidnaped on the night of March 1 from the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., brought only negative results today.

Two New Jersey state troopers went to Downingtown, Pa., and questioned Albert Lacher and Edith Crebbe, who were placed under observation several days ago on a suspicion voiced by the Rev. G. Paul Musselman, rector of St. James Protestant Episcopal church there. The troopers returned to Trenton, N. J., tonight. Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commanding the state police, said they were satisfied that Lacher and Miss Crebbe had no connection with the Lindbergh case.

Col. Schwarzkopf added that Col. Lindbergh had not reported any contact with the kidnapers. It was reported in Downingtown that Col. Lindbergh secretly visited a baby farm near there a week ago to inspect a child resembling his son, but found that it was not the missing boy.

John Hughes Curtis, who has been trying for weeks to bring about the restoration of the child, was absent from Norfolk again today and was believed to be at sea on the yacht Macon.

Motion pictures of a baby left in a nursery at San Jose, Cal., recently were run off in the Lindbergh home in the presence of members of the family, but that baby, too, they found, was not their own.

ROSSETTER ASKS MORE LIBERAL TARIFF POLICY

George W. Rossetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, last night forwarded to President Hoover and Senators Glenn and Lewis a telegram urging a more liberal interpretation of tariff regulations as a measure to restore the volume of foreign trade.

The tariff policy of the country, Mr. Rossetter declared, is inconsistent with the position of the leading commercial nation of the world. Through imitation of this policy, he added, practically all countries have raised their tariff barriers in the last two years, with the result that American exporters find it increasingly difficult to do business. He estimated that restrictions on international trade had taken away the livelihood of 2,000,000 families.

"We recommend to congress that legislation be enacted as soon as possible making provision for bargaining or reciprocal concessions in tariff rates."

AGREE ON PLAN TO EXTEND TIME FOR TAX PAYING Relief Program Will Go to Assembly Today.

Chicago and downstate members of the legislature agreed upon a tax relief program during a three hour meeting yesterday in the Chicago club. The program, principally a plan for extending the time for paying 1930 and 1931 Cook county taxes, was taken to Springfield last night by Corporation Counsel Sexton. It will be introduced in the legislature this morning.

It appeared likely last night that the main proposals in the plan will be considered for the remainder of this week when adjournment for seven days will be taken so that a joint committee of house and senate members may meet in Chicago and put the bills in shape for passage later on. Such a procedure would depend on the attitude of the downstaters, it was explained. They appeared amenable at yesterday's meeting.

Kelly Tells of Meeting.

D. F. Kelly acted as spokesman for the group after it had adjourned. He emphasized the favorable attitude manifested by State Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet and others as indicative of downstate willingness to "go along" with the program if the Chicago members approve it. Speaker David E. Shanahan assured the committee that he will use his influence for it, Mr. Kelly said.

As explained by Mr. Kelly, the essence of the plan consists in first moving the penalty date for 1930 taxes from May 1 to June 1. The taxpayer then would have the option of paying all of his bill by June 1 or of paying half of it on June 1 and the remaining half on Nov. 1. Those who took advantage of this extended payment plan would be assessed the 1 per cent a month penalty but their properties would not be foreclosed upon until the due date had been passed.

The same plan would apply for 1931 taxes. The first half of the tax bill would be due on April 1, 1933, and the second half on Nov. 1, 1933.

Many of Bills Ready.

Mr. Kelly described the meeting as "most successful" and was optimistic over the program adopted. Many of the bills have been already drawn. Those not finished will be submitted to Dewitt Billman of the Legislative Reference Bureau at Springfield along with the main measures so that they will be certain of complying with the law if passed.

Assessor J. L. Jacobs, who attended the meeting, explained several bills he wishes introduced. These would make slight changes in the so called Kelly plan which revised the taxing machinery, and also would "add teeth" to the personal property law. He will be present in Springfield today.

Last week Senator Barr was one of those leaders in the assembly eager for an early adjournment, but because of the cooperation he showed at yesterday's meeting Mr. Kelly and others interested in the extended payment program "hope and believe" that the downstate members will be willing to sit longer, once assured that the Chicago members all wish the program to succeed and that it represents the ideas of all interests for tax relief.

Realty Board Represented.

Representatives of the Chicago Real Estate board, including J. Soule Warterfield, president, were present at the meeting. This organization has been active in behalf of a "funding" plan for 1931 taxes, by means of a large bond issue. It was understood that this plan has not been wholly abandoned, although the question of how the bonds could be disposed of is still worrying officials.

Besides Mr. Kelly, Mr. Sexton, Speaker Shanahan, Senator Barr, Assessor Jacobs, and Mr. Warterfield, the conferees yesterday included Senator Thomas J. Courtney, Democratic minority leader; Senator Roy C. Woods of Chicago, Representative David I. Swanson, Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher of the Criminal court and Attorneys Francis X. Busch and Hayden Bell.

The success of another measure—the new $20,000,000 poor relief bond issue advocated by the emergency relief commission—also is at stake in the legislature. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., commission president, will appear before the finance committee of the Cook county board today to present the report of the commission which says that $20,000,000 will be necessary for poor relief work in the state next year. He will go to Springfield after his appearance before the committee.

HELD ON DRY LAW CHARGES.

Barney L. Ross and Gus Fink, employés of the Century café, 2843 North Clark street, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bond of $1,500 each by Commissioner Walker on charges of prohibition law violations.

Before and After Mayor Cermak Explained Things

Teachers of the Le Moyne and Haugen schools who visited Mayor Cermak to ask why they were not being paid, waiting to see the mayor, their faces yesterday showing weariness and resentment.

CERMAK CALMS TEACHERS WHO ASK A PAY DAY

Sends Them Home in Happier Mood.

sons jammed the school board office at 126 North Wells street on the opening day of the exchange of scrip for tax warrants. The rush was caused by rumors circulated by some teachers' organization that there would not be enough warrants to go around. School officials characterized the rumors as "foolish," in view of Mayor Cermak's agreement with President Myers.

Yesterday was the first day of spring vacation, and teachers, civil service employés and merchants who had accepted scrip began lining up outside the North Wells street building at 7:30 a. m. At the height of the crush there were nearly a thousand persons in lines extending up the stairs to the second floor, where the warrants were given out, and on the sidewalk in front of the building.

The extra police, called after the 12 women fainted, kept the lines in good order. There was no hysteria or serious disorder, board employés said. The doors were closed at 4:30 p. m., and at 6 p. m. all of those within the building had been served. Approximately $500,000 worth of small denomination 1931 tax warrants were given out during the day, it was estimated.

The "N. S. F." pay checks which are being traded for warrants were for the last half of April and the month of May, 1931. They were issued last week to those employés who refused to take scrip for those periods.

The small denomination 1931 warrants received in exchange for scrip or checks can be converted into cash immediately by the holders, but at a severe discount. The warrants were quoted yesterday at 70 to 76 cents on the dollar. Department stores and other merchants, however, are accepting them at full value in some cases.

To Name Two New Trustees.

Mayor Cermak announced definitely yesterday that he will submit two appointments to the board of education at the meeting of the city council on Friday. The new appointees will replace Oscar Durante and Walter H. Brandenburg, whose terms expire April 30.

"I am not yet decided whose names I will submit," said the mayor, and when shown published predictions of his choice denied knowing any of those whose names were mentioned. He said both appointees would be men capable of contending with the opposition on the board.

It is said that the mayor has had twenty-five persons under consideration for the position, but has narrowed the field down to six.

TAX SPENDERS GET $13,935,000 REVENUE TODAY

$188,000,000 of Levy Is Still Unpaid.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

County Collector McDonough will distribute $13,935,000 of collected taxes to the various expending agencies this morning. This will permit the biggest pay day since Nov. 15 last. The sum is equivalent to a month and a half's compensation for the 40,000 employés of the nine principal local governments.

If, however, all of the money is used for salaries and wages, some of the governments may join the west park system, the forest preserves, and the sanitary district in the default on bonds. Taxes are not coming in to meet the expenses of the governments at the present rate of spending. Only $1,304,606 was paid yesterday on the 1930 taxes. Less than $102,000,000 of a total levy of $290,000,000 has been collected so far.

Citizens Unable to Pay.

The counter clerks of the collector's office, who talk with hundreds of property owners daily—7,987 bills were paid yesterday—say that many citizens assert they lack the money for taxes and they complain that taxes are too high.

The collection figures indicate that not one-half of the 1930 taxes will be paid this month, nor next month.

The table below shows the amount to be paid over to each local government today, the amounts previously paid, which make a grand total of $62,382,598 to date:

Government—	Paid today.	Prev. paid.
City and schools	$10,000,000	$32,700,000
State	500,000	3,754,437
County	1,835,000	3,678,000
Forest preserves	200,000	550,000
South park	500,000	2,900,000
West park	250,000	745,000
Lincoln park	150,000	765,000
Sanitary district	500,000	3,355,161
Totals	$13,935,000	$48,447,598

"The payments will help the grocers, butchers, landlords, and other creditors of the teachers, policemen, firemen, and other public employés," said McDonough. "To that extent it will aid the situation, and if all of the people are as hard pressed as those in my ward there is the most urgent need to relieve conditions. We will distribute more money as soon as the allotments can be made."

Amounts Paid Are Small.

None of the railroads came forward with any tax payments yesterday. The owners of personal property contributed $111,194 and the real estate owners paid $1,193,411; but all of yesterday's taxpayers were small property owners. The average payment was less than $165.

The following table shows the taxes levied for 1930 and the taxes paid so far:

Property—	Taxes levied.	Taxes paid.
Railroad	$ 13,339,415	$ 8,444,061
Personal	55,492,275	18,378,491
Real estate	221,452,080	75,175,964
Totals	$290,283,770	$101,998,517

This table includes the collections of yesterday. It differs from the one printed yesterday because a clerk in the collector's office transposed about $8,000,000 of one kind of taxes to another classification.

The collections so near the supposed penalty date are smaller relatively than the year after the great fire of 1871. Records are not available farther back.

Hurley Named to Head Oklahoma Parley Envoys

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 25.—(AP)—Oklahoma Republicans today named Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war, to head their delegation of 25 to the national convention and instructed the group to vote for the renomination of President Hoover and Vice President Curtis.

TODAY IS CIRCUS DAY IN SENATE; HEFLIN TO ROAR FOR TWO HOURS

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Senate Republicans who suffered under the rantings of former Senator Thomas Heflin [Dem., Ala.] and who breathed a sigh of relief when John H. Bankhead defeated him at the last election allowed politics to change their minds today.

The matter was the contest Mr. Heflin brought against Senator Bankhead. Senator Trammel [Dem., Fla.] announced that Mr. Heflin would like to be heard in his own behalf. The senate, he showed, had granted a similar request by a contestant back in 1852. Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader, opposed the motion with caustic comment. Others aided him.

The roll was called. There were 21 Republicans among the 32 who wanted to let Mr. Heflin talk. There were 11 among the 32 who did not want him to. It looked as if Vice President Curtis would have to pronounce the deciding judgment.

Suddenly Senator Kean [Rep., N. J.] jumped up and called out: "I change my vote from 'nay' to 'yea.'"

The Republicans, therefore, congratulated themselves because they figure they have shown that they have a chance to unseat Mr. Bankhead, thus cutting down the Democratic ranks. And Mr. Heflin will talk for two hours tomorrow.

PROSECUTOR OILS LEGAL GUNS TO FIGHT SAM HUNT

Assistant State's Attorney Russell Root was unusually busy yesterday. When asked to explain why he kept poring over law books and records of criminal cases he said:

"'Golf Bag' Sam Hunt goes to trial tomorrow on another gun carrying charge. This time he didn't have his artillery in a golf bag, but it was found in his right rear trouser pocket. Ordinarily that evidence would be sufficient to convict, but we know Sam. I suppose I'll have to fight motions for continuance, suppression of evidence, change of venue and anything else that Sam's lawyers may think of. I'm just getting ready."

Hunt, a Capone gangster, attracted notice in 1930. Three north side youths saw a man shot by a gang in an automobile. The witnesses saw the wounded man, heard him talk, saw the gunmen come and take their victim into their car. A special policeman ran toward the scene of the shooting and pulled a man off the running board of the departing automobile. It was Sam Hunt, who was carrying a sawed off shotgun in a golf bag.

Last week Sam and his brother Joseph were walking along the street. Lieut. William Cusack and his detective bureau squad were passing and they recognized Sam and arrested him. They searched him and found a gun.

UNPAID TEACHERS IN ARGENTINA TO STRIKE 24 HOURS

BUENOS AIRES, April 25.—(AP)—Teachers, students and telephone operators throughout Argentina threatened today to go on strike.

The teachers' directorate ordered a 24 hour walkout because overdue salaries have not been paid. Students decided to take April 29 off in protest against school regulations.

The telephone operators, who have demanded a 44 hour week, no more 11 hour night shifts and the reëmployment of all workers dismissed for reasons of economy, announced they would strike if their demands are not met.

WEALTH WILLED TO CHILDREN OF GEN. ABEL DAVIS

Friend of Father Leaves Them Most of Estate.

The three children of Gen. Abel Davis, chairman of the board of the Chicago Title and Trust company—Florence, 8 years old; Abel Jr., 7, and Jean, 7 months old, will inherit ultimately the largest share of the $100,000 estate of the late Leopold A. Dunne, who was a lifelong friend of their father.

This was revealed yesterday when Mr. Dunne's will was admitted to probate by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. Mr. Dunne was 72 years old when he died last March 5 in his home at 1261 Loyola avenue. He was for many years a deputy coroner.

Under the provisions of the will two sisters, Miss Laura P. Dunne and Miss Kathleen H. Dunne, both of 4152 Kenmore avenue, are given a life interest in their brother's property, most of which is left in trust. After the death of the sisters the trust income will be divided between Mrs. Mary L. Frank of 1306 Albion avenue and Mrs. Sarah Menke, who lived at Mr. Dunne's home, both friends of Mr. Dunne.

Bequest to Masonic Order.

The trust terminates after the death of Mr. Dunne's friends. A quarter of the principal is given to the Grand Lodge of the Masons of Illinois, one half of this sum to be used in the endowment of an orphans' home at La Grange and the remainder for the Old Folks' home at Sullivan, Ill.

The remainder of the principal is to be shared equally by the children of Gen. Davis, according to the terms of the will. If other children are born before the termination of the trust they too are to share equally in the bequest. The Davis home is at 600 Sheridan road, Glencoe.

Mr. Dunne left direct bequests to two brothers and another sister. He willed $3,000 to Otto Dunne, 2230 Washington boulevard; $1,000 to Romeo Dunne of Pittsburgh, and $2,000 to Mrs. Gertrude Sullivan, 41 North Lorel avenue.

Library Receives Gift.

A gift of $3,000 to the Chicago Public library by the late Rose C. Quinn of Chicago was sent to the library board yesterday by the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, executors of the estate. The money is to be used in the purchase of books for children, the will specifies.

MRS. SINCLAIR LEWIS INVITES HIS FRIENDS TO "TAKE THE AIR"

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 25.—Sinclair Lewis and his wife, the former Dorothy Thompson, did not come to France to get a divorce. Reporters whose suspicions had been aroused by the fact that the Nobel prize winner and his wife were coming to Europe simultaneously on different boats and also the fact that they occupy adjoining but separate suites at a hotel here were disappointed when Lewis appeared at the railway station today to give his wife an affectionate greeting.

Later at the hotel Lewis was engaged in conversation with a priest and a reporter when Mrs. Lewis stalked into the room.

"Meet some of my dear old friends," said Sinclair, presenting the priest and a reporter.

"I should be pleased to see some of your dear old friends clear out of here so we might go to dinner," she replied.

All Lewis could think up in the way of snappy comebacks was "Now, darling." After an animated whisper conversation in the corner with his better half, Lewis regretfully suggested to his guests that the meeting adjourn.

VOTE TOMORROW TO TEST HOUSE'S ECONOMY STAND

Showdown Due on Rule; Foes Open Attack.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—A showdown on the question of government economy will be had in the house Wednesday when a special rule, granted by the rules committee today to pave the legislative road for the 200 million dollar retrenchment bill, is scheduled for a vote on the floor.

Failure to adopt the rule will virtually kill the omnibus economy bill since under parliamentary procedure no legislation can be introduced in an appropriation measure. The retrenchment program is legislation, and it was for the specific purpose of legalizing its attachment to the legislative supply bill that the rule was granted.

Should the rule be approved, the retrenchment program will be brought up for consideration probably on Thursday. The legislative supply bill which has been sidetracked pending preparation of the economy rider, must be read for amendment before consideration of the retrenchment bill can begin. Night sessions are to be held every day from Wednesday on until the economy program is disposed of.

Change Bill Overnight.

The retrenchment measure, over which the special house economy committee has worked for eight weeks, was formally introduced in the house just before adjournment today. As brought in, however, it had been changed in several respects from the form in which it was made available to the press yesterday.

The principal alteration was the insertion of a section setting up a committee of three senators and three representatives to investigate and study the entire question of veterans' legislation with a view to revising it.

Another change was the elimination of the section placing the cost of the Philippine scouts on the island government. Instead, the President, in the bill as introduced, is authorized to cut down the size of the Philippine scout organization or abolish it as he sees fit.

A third alteration was the transfer of the radio division of the department of commerce to the federal radio commission. Several other changes were effected betwen last night and the introduction of the bill today.

Attack on Economy Opens.

While house leaders were greasing the legislative runway for the economy bill with the special rule, opponents of government economy, and especially of the pay cut proposal embodied in the bill, were marshaling their forces for a bitter fight on the rule. Failing to defeat that, they are preparing to vote down the bill, emasculate it beyond any chance of senate approval, or throw it out by means of some other parliamentary technicality.

No sooner had Chairman John McDuffie [Dem., Ala.] introduced the measure late today than Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.] made a point of order against it, "for whatever it was worth." His action followed a statement by him earlier on the floor that the rule will be defeated and that Republican members, with the aid of votes "picked up" on the Democratic side, can "throw out the whole darn thing."

Pay Cut Main Target.

The provision in the economy bill providing for a flat 11 per cent cut in federal salaries over $1,000 will be the principal target for opponents of the measures. The provisions affecting veterans' affairs also are scheduled for a fight when deliberations on the bill commence.

Under the rule brought out today four amendments may be introduced to each of the ten titles in the bill.

It was Representative John J. Boylan [Dem., N. Y.] who led the fight on the bill on the floor today, with the assertion that "never in the history of congress has a rider of this gigantic proportion been attached to a bill." He was joined in his protests by nearly a dozen other members before the hour's time allotted him had expired.

Among other opponents of the measure to voice their opposition today were Representative William I. Sirovich [Dem., N. Y.], who urged the house to defeat the rule, throw out the economy bill, and then abolish the economy committee.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton [Dem., Tex.] offered to join forces in throwing out the whole measure unless the pay cut exemption is raised to $2,200.

Representative La Guardia charged Democratic leadership with bringing in a "gag rule" governing consideration of the bill.

RIVAL JURIES IN NEW DELAY TO AWAIT RULING

Further postponement of activities by the rival special grand juries was ordered yesterday by Chief Justice Harry M. Fisher of the Criminal court and Judge Michael Feinberg of the Circuit court. The postponements were ordered in expectation of a recess opinion by the state Supreme court stating which of the grand juries has the right to proceed.

Judge Feinberg's jury was ordered to investigate possible primary frauds and the appointments of bank receivers and receivers' attorneys by all the judges. However, little trouble developed at the primary, and other agencies undertook to scan the appointments by the various chancery judges. Judge Feinberg said yesterday he still intends to have his jury investigate the appointments, if his jury is held illegal. The Feinberg jury adjourned until Friday. Judge Feinberg continued until May 9 the contempt case against George Seif, clerk of the Criminal court, in connection with the jury mixup. Judge Fisher continued his jury for a week.

Charles P. Megan, president of the Bar association, announced that Attorney Carl R. Latham had accepted the chairmanship of the bar committee on receiverships and mortgage foreclosure, the chairmanship which Louis E. Hart resigned to accept appointment by Judge Feinberg as special prosecutor. The committee will investigate the judicial appointments, Mr. Megan added.

HUSBAND GETS KISS AND ARREST ON ARRIVAL HOME

When Jack Wellines, 33 years old, alighted from a Detroit-to-Chicago bus yesterday his wife, Mrs. Frances Schultz Wellines, 1630 Blackhawk street, a nurse, and her brother, Edward Schultz, a South Park policeman, were at the depot.

Mrs. Wellines kissed him. Policeman Schultz arrested him. At the detective bureau Wellines confessed perplexity as to why he should be charged with bigamy.

He had met his wife, he said, through a matrimonial ad which appeared in Schlossers Club, an agency paper published at Grays Lake, Ill. At the time he was at Hyannis, Mass.

Wellines said that he went to Detroit three weeks ago in search of work. It was on his return yesterday that he was arrested. He said that in applying for a job, he gave the name of Ralph E. Gordon for reference, but that he didn't know anyone by that name.

Wellines' theory in his arrest proved to be correct.

"Yes," said Mrs. Wellines last night. "I suspected my husband's name was Ralph E. Gordon, not Wellines, and when he went to Detroit I wrote to the marriage authorities there. They informed me that Ralph E. Gordon had married Lillian A. Behr last August. He married me in September."

Both sides will tell their stories in the Felony court today.

Sentenced to 90 Days on Three Girls' Charges

OIL, COAL, COPPER TARIFFS ADDED TO NEW TAX BILL

Senate Committee Action Is by Close Vote.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—The tariffs of imported oil and coal which the house added to the new billion dollar tax bill were nailed in place even more firmly today by the affirmative action of the senate finance committee before which the revenue measure is now pending.

Not only did the committee members by close votes keep these two duties in the bill, but they added a third, by providing for an import tax on copper, at a rate to be determined later. With the copper duty the tariff effort came to a halt, however, and proposed taxes on imported lumber and shingles were defeated.

The ballot on the house provision for a 1 cent a gallon oil tariff saw the attempt to strike the tax from the bill fail by a tie vote, 9 to 9. Seven Republicans and two Democrats voted to keep it in; three regular Republicans, one Republican radical, and five Democrats voted for removal.

How They Voted.

The committee divided as follows:

FOR—Republicans: Bingham, Couzens, Reed, Shortridge, Smoot, Thomas of Idaho, and Watson. Democrats—Connally and Gore.

AGAINST — Republicans: Jones, Keyes and Metcalf. Radical Republican—La Follette. Democrats—Costigan, George, Harrison, Hull, and Walsh of Massachusetts.

The vote on the coal import tax of $2 a ton was 9 to 8 in favor of keeping it in the bill, with Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.] not voting and Senator Jones [Rep., Wash.] voting, this time, with the tariff supporters.

A copper tax was added by a vote of 10 to 8; the vote against lumber was 10 to 8 the other way, and a tax on shingles was defeated, 10 to 7.

Concurs in House Features.

Passing up for the time being consideration of the various rates of the income, estate, and inheritance taxes, the senate committee took up various administrative features of the house bill and concurred in the house provisions:

It agreed to the provision striking out the $300 exemption now allowed the recipient of income from a building and loan association and to the provision imposing the normal tax on dividends received from small corporations coming within the corporations exemption limitation.

It agreed that state and national banks and trust companies should, like dealers in securities, be exempted from the requirements that losses from securities transactions shall be deductible only in the amount of gains made from the same source in the same year.

The committee agreed to the house provision concerning the depletion allowance for mines and to the reduction of the corporation exemption to $1,000.

SUED FOR $250,000

ROBT. G. STEWART. MRS. PHYLLIS SHAW STEWART.

ROBT. G. STEWART, SON OF OIL MAN, SUED BY ACTRESS

Demands $250,000 for Breach of Promise.

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Robert G. Stewart, president of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport corporation, and son of Col. Robert W. Stewart of Teapot dome fame, was sued for $250,000 breach of promise today by Jacqueline [Jacky] Hunter, young Broadway musical comedy actress.

In the papers, filed in Supreme court, the stage beauty declared the oil magnate promised to marry her as soon as his second wife, Mrs. Phyllis Shaw Stewart, obtained a divorce in Paris.

Stewart told her, she said, the Paris divorce was only a matter of weeks; that his wife was even then in the French capital engaged in sundering the chains.

Fooled Her, She Says.

This was in February, 1928. He repeated at various times his assurances he would make her his third bride, she added, until seven months later when he informed her the Paris proceedings had fallen through.

Even then she continued to trust him, Miss Hunter set forth, and it was not until Jan. 15, 1931, she learned there had never been the slightest move for divorce in the Stewart household.

"I also learned," she said, "that he has a 16 year old daughter, Betty Jane, by his first wife, and that he is the father of an illegitimate daughter about the same age."

Denies Part of Charges.

Her attorney, Harry G. Fromberg, will oppose a motion by Stewart's lawyer, Julian T. Abeles, to strike out various parts of the complaint. Stewart denies the existence of a love child.

Stewart's father lost the presidency of the $750,000,000 Standard Oil Company of Indiana in 1929 after defying John D. Rockefeller Jr. to oust him. Rockefeller demanded Stewart's resignation as a result of the latter's activities that preceded the Teapot dome oil scandal.

The elder Stewart went to trial on charges of having committed perjury before the senate oil investigating committee, but was acquitted.

EVANSTON GETS A DOG CATCHER, ECONOMY OR NO

Evanston will have a dog catcher this summer as usual beginning May 1 and at a salary of $100 monthly, plus $40 expenses.

The inclusion of a dog catcher to the city pay roll was certified at a meeting of the city council last night, but not without opposition. Ald. Herbert Simpson's argument clinched the matter, however. Ald. Samuel Parsons had objected that a dog catcher was not needed if an economy program was to be maintained, Ald. Simpson answered.

"Unfortunately," he said, "while Evanston is known as an educational center, we haven't been able to educate our dogs not to bite."

VETS GRIN AND GROWL AS BONUS HEARING SURGES

Infantry Chaplain Hissed for Opposition.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—A roomful of ex-service men hissed today when they heard the former chaplain of the 115th infantry, 29th division, tell the members of the house ways and means committee:

"I want you to understand that there are at least some veterans who don't want another handout."

The speaker was the Rev. Fred C. Reynolds of Baltimore.

The veterans grumbled at James A. Emery, representing the National Association of Manufacturers. Looking very much like the late Sir Thomas Lipton, Mr. Emery, with his white mustache and goatee, was given to aphorisms.

"It is a poor trade to swap a possible higher price level for a certain currency chaos," was one of them, as he argued against issuing 2 billions 400 millions in feebly secured currency, as some plans for the bonus payment have suggested.

Veterans Grin and Groan.

"The seeds of Populism are not yet dead," he remarked with a grim eye turned to some of the Democratic members whose questions showed that they would like nothing better than to loose that very flood of greenbacks.

Take no step, he counseled, without surety that the ground is firm.

"Well, if we keep slipping down all the while it's about time we took a step somewhere," retorted Representative Hill [Dem., Wash.].

The audience of veterans laughed at this hit at the spokesman of "big business."

"But I wouldn't jump down to the bottom of the hole in order to get a fresh start," Mr. Emery came back.

The veterans mumbled their displeasure.

Two New Plans Offered.

Two new payment plans were submitted to the committee before the session ended. One, by Representative Pettengill [Dem., Ind.], to exchange bonus certificates at their present value, their "present value" to be fixed according to a low interest rate, for negotiable government bonds of small denominations due in 1945.

The other by Representative McKeown [Dem., Okla.] which, in essence, would permit the treasury to sell the certificates to national banks, and national banks to redeposit them as security for the issue of bank notes in the amount of the certificates' present value.

SHOOTS WOMAN WHO LEFT HIM; ENDS OWN LIFE

Nearly four years ago Mrs. Susie Kisylia, now 28 years old, deserted her husband and five children in East Chicago, and went to live in Newark, N. J., with Michael Turovski, 44.

Three weeks ago Mrs. Kisylia deserted Turovski as she had her husband. Since then she had been living with her husband at 4023 Euclid street, East Chicago. He had forgiven her. Yesterday she was sitting with him in the kitchen of their home.

The door opened. Turovski, whom she believed to be in Newark, stepped in. As her husband looked on, Turovski drew a revolver. He shot Mrs. Kisylia three times, then fired a bullet into his own temple. He died immediately. Mrs. Kisylia was taken to St. Catherine's hospital in East Chicago. She will recover.

FATHER RETURNS WITH "KIDNAPED" BOY AND FILES DIVORCE SUIT

Des Moines, Ia., April 25.—(AP)—Dr. K. Meredith returned home from Los Angeles today with his 6 year old son, Loren Kenneth Jr., reported kidnaped in California Friday.

Through attorneys, Dr. Meredith immediately filed a divorce petition and was granted a restraining order to prevent Mrs. Meredith from interfering with Dr. Meredith's custody of their three children.

"I took my son and brought him home to Des Moines, where his brother, Richard, 11, and his sister, Janet, 8, have been staying all the time," Dr. Meredith said, adding, "The boy never was 'kidnaped' and no one seriously thought he was."

Dr. Meredith said the "mysterious phone call" his wife reported to police after the boy disappeared from in front of her home was a call he made to inform her he had taken the boy.

The great "TOOTH" mystery

Why do teeth start to go when you're young? Why do some people keep them longer than others? Why does the dentist talk about "pyorrhea" when you are worrying about "teeth"?

The loss of teeth has no connection with wrinkles and gray hair. Today you may flash a carefree smile that shows white teeth without a flaw. Tomorrow your dentist may be forced to remove one of them, or two, or three.

The shock is cruel in these cases, not so much from pain as from hurt pride. It seems very mysterious to the victim, particularly if he has always thought he was giving his teeth the proper care. Brushing teeth night and morning, keeping them beautifully clean—this he has done but it was not enough. The average person is likely to think only of the surface. The dentist's thoughts go deeper. For pyorrhea is a gum disease.

Don't neglect seeing your dentist periodically. And when you brush your teeth, use Forhan's, the toothpaste for both gums and teeth. It is the lifework of a specialist in pyorrhea, Dr. R. J. Forhan. Pyorrhea may be eating down into your gums for five or ten years before it causes the loss of a single tooth. But half the lost adult teeth are actually taken by this dreaded disease. That is why the dentist worries about your gums.

Get ahead of pyorrhea. Buy Forhan's Toothpaste today and start immediately to clean your teeth and massage your gums according to the directions in the package. Forhan's comes in a big brown tube that lasts a long time. It is pleasant. You will like it and so will every child old enough to use a brush. All drug stores.

A BIRD HUNTER FINDS BEST GUN IS BINOCULARS

With This Simple Hobby He Beats the Years.

Here is not news of war or crime or scandal, nor even of politics—and perhaps not news at all—but it is a tale of a man who has pursued a simple hobby which gave him pleasure and longevity, and the tale is passed on for what it may be worth to a world in need of a simple hobby.

Harry Allen's hobby isn't new, either. School children have followed it as a duty, and scientists have pursued it professionally, but Mr. Allen just sort of putters around at it, for the love of it.

He hunts birds with a pair of binoculars. Every Saturday morning—especially these Saturday mornings of spring—Mr. Allen forsakes his insurance business and takes to the woods and sloughs near his Riverside home.

A Notebook of Trophies.

The hardier winged messengers, coming while the bite of winter has not yet relaxed, are jotted down in Mr. Allen's notebook, and then, as the days grow warmer, the sky is more and more alive with quickened shadows and the trilled notes of feathered songsters. And Mr. Allen's collection grows apace.

Finding a bird that seldom visits these parts gives Mr. Allen a thrill like that of the philatelist in discovering a rare stamp.

If any ornithologist has let his glance run on this far through this tale, let him take his eyes to another column, for Mr. Allen holds no brief as a scientist, and the reporter's confessed knowledge of bird identity is limited to sparrow, robin and buzzard, though he might still remember the American eagle.

A Pair of Canada Geese!

With this apologetic warning, then, the unschooled reader is privileged to receive Mr. Allen's report that he was truly elated last Saturday when young Alan Cameron, his neighbor and companion on these bird hunts, spied a pair of Canada geese perched on a log in a slough near Riverside.

"You can see them on the wing, if you're quick enough about it," said Mr. Allen yesterday. "But they seldom light in this clime."

A bit further along Cameron's keen eye spotted a real find—a pied bill grebe sitting on a nest. Then flocks of ducks, mallards, pintails, bluebills, shovelers.

Focusing his glasses on a clan of blue wing teal, Mr. Allen was surprised to find in their midst a pair—drake and his mate—of cinnamon teals. Cinnamon teals, Mr. Allen, said, are rarely seen in the north, being characteristically inhabitants of the southwest country.

"Bag" 36 in a Day.

The two birdglass hunters went on through the morning and then, counting their "bag," they numbered 36 varieties. The Saturday before they had found others to bring their net score for this spring to 56.

"But we haven't been into the woods for them yet," Mr. Allen said.

He told of having made his home grounds into a bird sanctuary, with houses, baths and frequently scattered crumbs. For reward, he is host every year to multicolored flocks.

"Get yourself a good strong pair of binoculars, a few bird books—the kind with colored plates are easily obtained—and go out to see what you can bring in," Mr. Allen suggested. "It's joy and a good game and it gives you the stuff to beat the years."

Mr. Allen, an official of the Union Central Life Insurance company, is in his sixties, but you'd never believe him much past 50. He has been an outdoorsman—for the fun of it only, mind you—all of his life, and he loves to fish and hunt.

"It's a big kick when I bag a double of ducks," he said, "but it's almost as big a kick when I miss the beggars altogether."

THREE MEN SHOT DURING A FRAY WITH A MANIAC

Three men were shot last night in Kedzie avenue near Roosevelt road when Nathan Omanski, apparently demented, rushed through the street brandishing a revolver, and shouting, "I'm a communist." He was one of those wounded, and was beaten into unconsciousness by a mob of 200 angry men and women.

The self-proclaimed communist first appeared on a second floor landing at 1230 South Kedzie avenue. His shouts attracted Mrs. Anna Green, who lives on the third floor of that address. When she descended one landing to learn the cause of the disturbance Omanski pursued her into the street, and fired four shots at her.

Isadore Friedman, 2251 Augusta boulevard, owner of a meat market at 1234 South Kedzie avenue, seized Omanski from behind. In the struggle Friedman was shot in the abdomen, and Nathan Saxon, 60, of 3258 5th avenue, a bystander, was hit in the leg. Despite his wound, Friedman disarmed the demented man, and shot him in the left leg. Immediately the crowd pounced upon the gunman. Police saved him.

CALL SURPRISE WITNESS TODAY IN STOCK INQUIRY

Senators May Hear of Kreuger Scandal.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—A surprise witness, said to have information of outstanding importance, will take the stand tomorrow when the senate banking and currency committee resumes its investigation into the activities of bulls and bears on the New York exchange.

In making this announcement tonight Chairman Peter A. Norbeck [Rep., S. D.] advised newspaper men to be on hand prepared to hear a story that will be a "big surprise." One report that came from what appeared to be an authentic source was that Representative F. H. La Guardia, the New York radical Republican would be the witness. If he appears, it is reported, he will discuss the Kreuger and Toll foreign bonds issue.

Name Steering Committee.

The decision to hold a session tomorrow came after the committee in executive session had reached a decision to make a sweeping inquiry into the whole stock and bond selling field insofar as it affected the stock exchange. A steering committee of five men, four of whom have been appointed, will plan the future course of the inquiry, line up witnesses, and prepare the evidence.

The steering committee members were appointed by Chairman Norbeck. They include Senators Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], Duncan U. Fletcher [Dem., Fla.], James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], and Mr. Norbeck.

Aim at Wall Street Bears.

Chairman Norbeck said the purpose of the committee inquiry is that of finding out whether American buyers and sellers of securities have a fair market. He said one of the big objectives was that of determining whether a general movement is on foot at this time on the part of the Wall street bears to destroy the value of property by short selling on the exchange.

Senator James Watson [Rep., Ind.], senate majority leader, said the short selling inquiry may last all summer. Senator Couzens said the same thing.

DETROIT GIVES MILK AND BREAD TO 11,000 DESTITUTE FAMILIES

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—(AP)—Eleven thousand families, receiving aid from Detroit's public welfare department, were receiving emergency rations of bread and milk today while the city council sought means of releasing additional funds to furnish them with food.

Its funds for April exhausted, the welfare department placed the 11,000 families on emergency rations yesterday.

Attempting to alleviate the situation, the council today authorized G. Hall Roosevelt, city controller, to use available city funds, including a $90,000 work wage pay roll due 10,000 workers last Thursday, for the relief. The workers' checks, Roosevelt said, will be released from the $1,004,000 now comprising the city's checking account.

Further funds probably will be needed, welfare officials said, and Mayor Frank Murphy is considering several plans for obtaining them. One plan under discussion involves a request to retail and wholesale grocers to furnish welfare food and supplies, with the understanding that payment by the city will be made later.

Boy, 13, Kills His Father, Wounds Mother, Brother

Phoenix, Ariz., April 25.—(AP)—Robert Merrell, 13 year old schoolboy, sought for the killing of his father and wounding of his mother and brother at the family home in Gilbert, Ariz., was found loitering in the stockyards here today.

The boy disappeared last night, riding his pony, after his mother said he had run amuck with a revolver. The stockyards is about 25 miles from his home. He told arresting officers: "I was mad."

CLEANER TARGET IN TWO ATTACKS BY HOODLUMS

A double attack was made last evening upon Albert Klimest, owner of a nonunion cleaning shop at 2021 Roscoe street, supposedly for his refusal to join the Laundry and Dyehouse Drivers' union. In one attack, several men forced his truck to the curb, and in the other a vandal smashed a bottle of acid in his shop.

Klimest said he abandoned his truck when he discovered he was being pursued and took shelter in a neighborhood store. This was at Roscoe street and Damen avenue. He recognized two of the men, he said, as Gene Frants, secretary, and Robert Raidl, business agent of the Laundry Drivers' union. Almost at the moment he eluded the pursuers, Klimest's shop was invaded by the vandal. The man, who walked with a limp, smashed an acid bottle on a counter.

Earlier in the day a double attack was also directed against the Goldblatt department store. Five men in an automobile threw a stench bomb into the store's bakery at 1632 West Superior street, driving out six employés, and then drove around the block to the store proper, at 1625 West Chicago avenue, and smashed two plate glass windows. Policeman Peter Wisislowski fired four shots at the men. Store officials blamed the attacks on unsuccessful efforts to unionize the store clerks.

FIRST 8 JURORS PICKED IN TRIAL OF SERRITELLA

Judge Refuses Delay in Weight Fraud Case.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Elbert Strong and James Davis, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years each in the penitentiary; Clark Asbury, Perrus Jones, James Auxydio, Richard Reese, George Rivers, Cyrus Werda and Mike Boras, larceny, sentenced to 1 year each in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Rudolph Desort.

The first eight jurors was selected yesterday in Judge James J. Kelly's court to try Daniel A. Serritella, former city sealer, and his chief deputy, Harry Hochstein, on charges of conspiracy. They are accused of making it possible for dealers to defraud the public out of a million dollars through short weights.

The case, which has been pending in the Criminal court for a year, was forced to trial by Judge Kelly, who overruled the efforts of the defense to obtain a further delay.

"Call a jury in the Serritella case," Judge Kelly told his clerk as he took the bench.

A battery of defense lawyers leaped to their feet with objections.

Ahern Seeks New Delay.

"I have just returned from Washington and would like a two days' continuance," Attorney Michael Ahern said.

Judge Kelly denied the request with the statement that the case would go to trial. A defense motion to quash the indictment was overruled, also a motion to suppress the evidence.

Defense Attorneys Ahern, Miles J. Devine, and Benedict Short based their motion to suppress the evidence on the contention that the evidence had been seized in an illegal raid on Serritella's offices in the city hall.

"And that's denied," was Judge Kelly's terse dismissal of the plea.

Cites Delay in Case.

In answer to Attorney Ahern's statement that he had been out of town and was unprepared, Judge Kelly said: "What have you been doing for the last year? This case has been before four judges and has been pending since last July 10."

The judge ended the argument with the reiteration of his order to call a jury and questioning of the veniremen was started.

The jurors selected are William F. Risch, 212 North Hamlin avenue, a baker; Thomas Barry, 4519 West End avenue, a glass packer; Joseph P. Elsnic, 6543 South Fairfield avenue, a radio dealer; Frank Halaska, 2430 West Roosevelt road, a second hand furniture dealer; Baldwin B. Eilers, 1926 South 54th court, Cicero, a civil engineer; William C. Gruber, 5404 Bishop street, employed in a wholesale grocery; Edwin E. Cheluis, 4856 Eddy street, in the chemical business, and Francis J. Cody of the Plaza hotel, Evanston, manager of a bus line.

TOWN OFFICIALS' TRIAL HALTED BY THEFT OF AUTO

Resumed on Recovery of Car and Records.

Automobile thieves caused an exciting interlude in a trial at the Criminal courts building yesterday when they stole an official automobile of the village of Steger and with it carried off records necessary to prosecution of two former village officials on charges of embezzlement.

Selection of a jury to try the two officials, Jens Holtomt, former mayor of Steger, and John Thorndike, former village trustee and chairman of the finance committee of the village board, was halted. It was resumed a few hours later when the car was recovered with the records intact.

Holtomt and Thorndike are charged with embezzlement of $20,000 from the village. Charles Stein, former village clerk and collector, was indicted with them but obtained a separate trial and may be a prosecution witness.

The records were taken to the Criminal Courts building by Gustave Gerhardt and Henry Lenzing, present village officials. They left the village automobile locked outside the building and went inside to seek Assistant State's Attorney Jo Calvin Webb, who was busy picking the jury before Judge Rudolph F. Desort. When they returned, the car was gone.

A police alarm was sent out, and Prosecutor Webb threatened prosecution of the thieves for obstructing justice as well as for the theft of the car. Some time later Lieut. William V. Blaul of the state's attorney's police found the stolen automobile abandoned, with the records undisturbed, near the Chicago river half a mile from the building.

Automobile thefts in the vicinity of 26th street and California avenue, where the county and city have their machinery for the trial and 'incarceration of criminals concentrated in the Criminal Courts building, county jail, and Bridewell, have become increasingly frequent in recent months, officials said. The state's attorney's office is considering placing armed guards in the vicinity to guard the automobiles of jurors and prosecutors against thieves.

Automobile thefts in Chicago as a whole are on the increase, but the percentage of cars recovered also has increased during the last year, it was said yesterday by Lieut. M. J. Wall of the stolen automobile division of the detective bureau. Thefts since Jan. 1, 1932, numbered approximately 15,000, of which 88 per cent were recovered.

Of the cars recovered, however, virtually all had some accessories missing, and the majority had been stripped of tires, bumpers, lights, and other removable parts, Lieut. Wall said. Because of a change in the system of records of the division, comparison with 1931 figures is not possible, he said.

In 1931, however, there were 35,145 cars reported stolen and 28,033 recovered. The percentage of cars recovered rose from 64 per cent during the first six months of the year to 90 per cent in the last six months, after the automobile division was reorganized and the new system of records, which takes into account cars missing only a few hours, was installed.

DIES OF SKULL FRACTURE.

Steve Makarkowski, 44 years old, 2122 West Nineteenth street, died yesterday at the county hospital of a fracture of the skull. His widow, Anna, told police that he came home bruised and bleeding Sunday morning but made no explanation of his injuries.

GRAND DUKE (OF HILLSBORO, ILL.) ARRIVES AGAIN

Is Extended Hospitality of Ellis Island.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—"The Grand Duke Michael Romanoff of Russia" came bounding in over the bounding main today and was immediately granted the hospitality of Ellis island instead of the customary freedom of the city. "The Grand Duke" is an old Ellis island boy and always puts up there when he comes to town. They know him as Harry F. Gerguson, the orphan prince of Hillsboro, Ill.

Mr. Gerguson has been around a lot under a lot of different names and has caused no end of trouble and embarrassment to both immigration authorities and socially prominent hosts. This is his first public reception here since 1924. On other occasions he has registered at the island as Prince Michael Alexandrovitch, Prince Obolenski, Lord Wallingford and Dr. Waecholtel.

"It is just Harry in trouble again," explained an Ellis island guard, as "The Grand Duke" was ferried across the bay from the liner Ile de France tugging furiously at his waxed mustache.

Small Town Boy Makes Good.

Harry is one small town boy who has made good in a big way, or to be more exact made a lot of big towns in a good way. The latest of his long list of escapades began at Havre when he stowed away first class on the Ile de France. When the liner steamed away the "Grand Duke" remained out of sight engaged in storing his personal effects, including an ivory-headed cane, in a dog kennel on the top deck.

Once on the high seas the duke of Hillsboro blossomed out like a petunia after an April shower and soon was lending his dapper presence to the promenade deck and the social rooms. After two nights in the dog kennel the duke, never an advocate of obscurity, informed a steward that he had lost his key, gave Capt. J. Blancart, the ship's commander, as a reference, and moved into more suitable quarters for one of his "rank." Thereafter he engaged his fellow passengers in conversation and made numerous social contacts. On the fourth day he was strolling the deck with Edward Cudahy Jr., conversing of "ships and shoes and sealing wax," and other trying world affairs. Quite casually he mentioned his close friendship with the ship's commander. Mr. Cudahy, who dined at the skipper's table, spoke that evening of his chat with the captain's royal friend.

"Never heard of the fellow," remarked Capt. Blancart. "I've no grand dukes on my ship."

Wardrobe Elaborates.

Meanwhile having moved his wardrobe from the dog kennel, the duke of Hillsboro was making three changes a day and becoming easier and easier on the eye. His democratic air and affable conversation made him welcome at every deck chair and his evenings were given over to drinking champagne with the friends he had made during the day. In fact, the duke was becoming a mild sensation and his shore invitations were beginning to pile up when he met Mr. Cudahy and overplayed his hand two days out of the dog kennel.

Thereafter he never got a break. A lot of people found it necessary to cancel a lot of invitations, for one cannot very well entertain a man in the brig. For the remainder of the voyage the rankest of the "rank" pretenders found little use for his ivory headed cane. He passed the hours dreaming of his ancestral home in Hillsboro until his reception at Ellis island.

This afternoon at the island he insisted he was merely an American citizen making a return trip. He probably will be released, as there is nothing else to do with him.

Harry the quince prince has been in more hot water than a boiled potato, but he has never peeled. He still has his veneer. They remember his debut on the island back in November, 1922, when he turned up among a shipload of belated world war veterans. Harry told the authorities he was a graduate of Oxford and Heidelberg universities. At old Heidelberg, he said, he was forced into a duel with a young German nobleman and killed him.

For this, Gerguson averred, he was sentenced to ten years' solitary confinement in a fortress. The tale went over big and Gerguson soon afterwards began to develop blue blood in his veins. As the months passed the blood got bluer and bluer, until he became Prince Michael Alexandrovitch. Then he developed indications of oratorical ability and lectured in London, Paris, and New York regarding his "experiences in Russia and the assassination of the monk, Rasputin."

In 1923, still sporting the proudest of Russian blood, Harry fell into the hands of Ellis island authorities again. This time he was Prince Dmitri Obolenski. Clad in a morning coat, striped trousers, pearl gray spats over toothpick shoes, the prince put his ivory headed walking stick between his teeth and leaped into New York bay to avoid examination. He made port correctly clad.

Social Lion in Tulsa.

In between his visits to the island, Harry found time to obtain and lose membership in the Racquet and Tennis club, drop down into Oklahoma and take Tulsa for a ride as a social lion. In Tulsa the "prince" conducted his social and business operations from a base at the University club. He is well remembered there as "one of the most artistic liars of the oil boom days."

St. Louis, Kansas City, and Wichita gave the "prince" the keys to their cities and then in 1924 he came back to Broadway and Park avenue. It was then that the "prince" met the "baron." They crashed society as "Prince Mike" and "Baron Willy" and then the police got after them. For a time "Prince Mike" languished in jail as a result of a $1,250 tapestry sale. He found the "gorgeous verbal combats" in the Tombs "amusing." He did a lot of other things and other people, getting into trouble in Texas, Washington, D. C., and Connecticut, and then he vanished only to turn up again today.

Harry Gerguson, according to records, is an orphan who was brought to Hillsboro, Ill., in 1908 from a New York orphanage. He tired of farm life and went out into the world to "get an education." He is now about 42 years old.

CHOOSES 90 DAYS RATHER THAN GO BACK TO SPOUSE

Springfield, Mass., April 25.—(AP)—Ellis Stevens, 27, who claims a connection with British nobility, marched himself off to jail today rather than go back to the waiting arms of his wife.

The prisoner, who, despite his claims to nobility, has been working as a janitor of a theater, was arrested a week ago in a house with Mrs. Olga Runyon of Elkhart, Ind. A jail sentence was imposed on the pair, but the appeals of Mrs. Runyon and her husband, a dentist, for a continuance were granted.

Mrs. Stevens hurried here from Albemarle, N. C., and was willing to take her husband back. The court gave Stevens a choice between a three months' sentence or a return to his wife. He chose the jail sentence.

Feron Will Be Arraigned Today in Oak Park Court

James M. Feron, of Oak Park, is to be arraigned today before Justice of the Peace William P. Churchill in Oak Park on a charge of illegally impersonating a police magistrate. Feron formerly held the office of police magistrate, but the Oak Park village board abolished his office last year. He has continued to perform the duties of the office, maintaining that his commission enables him to do so until his successor is elected and qualified.

SUES HIS INTENDED WIFE.

Joseph Wertz, 1240 Rosemont avenue, learned yesterday that his fiancée, Mrs. Josie Rickard, 2943 North Richmond street, was already married. He also found that his dead wife's clothing and diamond ring valued at $1,275 had disappeared with his intended bride. Wertz obtained a warrant charging larceny from Judge John J. Rooney in the Felony court.

MILLS SAYS U. S. AID DOES REACH AVERAGE CITIZEN

Replies to Roosevelt's Forgotten Man Speech.

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—A vigorous reply to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's charge that the Hoover administration has neglected the "forgotten man" or average citizen in extending millions of dollars of credit to the banks and railroads was made today by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press in the Waldorf-Astoria.

No proposal that has yet been advanced by any one for fighting the depression has been more calculated to aid the millions of small home owners, business men and working people in the United States than the Reconstruction Finance corporation, Mr. Mills asserted.

To Protect Depositors.

When credit was extended by it to the banks, to check a great wave of failures, he declared, it was not because of governmental solicitude for the stockholders so much as a determination to protect the millions of small depositors and to keep alive the credit facilities of small localities throughout the country.

So also the railroads were helped for the benefit of 63 million holders of life insurance policies and other millions of depositors in savings banks, since the insurance companies and banks held "many billions of dollars" of the railroads' underlying securities.

Pointing his remarks directly at Gov. Roosevelt's "forgotten man" address, Secretary Mills departed from the text of his prepared speech, leaned across the table toward his auditors and raised his voice to vehemence.

No Fear of Challenge.

"From the standpoint—and I say this without fear of being challenged by any one—of bringing greater relief and protection to more individuals needing protection, the passage of the reconstruction finance corporation has done more good and will continue to do more good than any other measure suggested by any one at this time," Secretary Mills said.

"I am not talking about some major purpose underpinning the present structure of the nation. I am talking of the work we performed to save the average American man and woman, the average citizen in this country, to protect him in his business activities and to protect him from being deprived of the use of his savings. I'm talking about the unknown men that some people do not know about."

Telling why the railroads "had to be" included in loans Secretary Mills said:

"Some gentlemen seem to think that the railroads are the private property of a few stockholders. I have great sympathy for the stockholders, measuring the price at which equities are selling today. But what are the railroads? They are the backbone of our transportation system. They are the largest employers of labor. Their underlying securities to the extent of many millions of dollars are held by the insurance companies, savings banks, and other fiduciary institutions which means that there is invested in them the savings of the American people.

Makes No Apologies.

"On the basis of these facts can anyone question the national necessity of maintaining the credit of the railroads, not only in the interests of commerce and industry, not only in the interests of the hundreds and thousands of men that work for them, but in the interest of the millions of individuals and their investment of the most sacred kind of family investment—the life insurance?

"These are fundamental reasons why in any program of national reconstruction the railroads had to be included. No one connected with the reconstruction finance corporation and no one who participated in grasping the fact has one word of apology to offer any one."

Mr. Mills' address was a declaration that the twin weapons whereby prosperity might be restored are a stimulation of the nation's credit and a restoration of popular confidence. Credit expansion, he said, must be controlled and come through the reserve banks.

NEWSPAPERS CARRY ON DESPITE LOWER INCOMES, A. P. TOLD

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Sustained circulations during the depression show that "newspapers have established themselves as a necessity," Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, stated today in his annual report to the board of directors of the association at its annual meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria.

American newspapers, said Mr. Cooper, "have not shirked their duty to the public of publishing the news in adequate form," despite economic conditions.

"To maintain the standards reached in recent years, all publishers have had to sustain severe losses," he said. "Although advertising revenues have fallen off tremendously, circulation has not decreased materially.

"Each community requires a complete supply of intelligence, more necessary in times of depression, perhaps, than in a prosperous era. To dig themselves out of depression people must think, and they cannot think unless they are reliably informed."

MONEY GRABBING CHARGE HURLED AT CHURCHMEN

Charging that costs of maintaining Episcopal churches in Chicago are not justified by results, Episcopal clergy of the city in their round table meeting yesterday were assailed as racketeers. The speaker was the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker, pastor of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, 3533 North Albany avenue, widely known as "the church at the end of the road." He charged that money getting was the chief aim of church leaders who have neglected "the reclamation of human souls."

As Mr. Tucker cited the large number of "funds" for which money is raised through "high pressure drives," he asked the clergymen if the product is worth more than its cost.

Mr. Tucker advocated a rigorous examination of the Episcopal parishes to determine whether those parishes contribute to the community the value equivalent to the "enormous sums spent to maintain them while the result of the expenditure is practically nil."

"Children of devoted Episcopal families," Mr. Tucker declared, "swarm out of Episcopal parishes into community churches, Lutheran churches, Presbyterian and Congregational churches because the church of their fathers and mothers is so busy painting her face that she has no time to look after her children."

31 INJURED, ONE FATALLY, IN GAS BLAST AT DETROIT

Several Buildings Are Wrecked by Blast.

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—Thirty-one persons were injured, one fatally, when an explosion of gas razed a plumbing shop and wrecked adjoining buildings in Highland Park today. William Hyman, 28, who was sitting in a car parked in front of the shop, died of injuries.

The roar of the blast was heard throughout Highland Park, store fronts in the neighborhood were blown in, and a woman blown bodily out of the plumbing shop.

A week ago the shop, a one story building owned by David Goodfriend, was moved about six feet to the building line. During this operation it is believed a high pressure gas main was left exposed. Today coal was dumped into the basement and the coal shoveler said he smelled gas.

Investigation by Fire Chief Baker showed the gas main was broken and all persons were ordered to leave the building immediately, but the blast occurred before they got out.

The other persons injured were in a laundry operated by Mrs. Lydia Thompson, next door to the plumbing shop, and the apartment above, and in a radio store operated by Robert Weir. These buildings all were wrecked, as was a one story structure occupied by the Independent Grocery company.

OFFICIAL VOTE FAILS TO UPSET SIMPSON'S LEAD

Official figures of the vote in the north shore country towns, in the neck and neck race in which James Simpson Jr. beat Ralph E. Church and Congressman Carl R. Chindblom on the face of the early police returns by some 300 plurality over Church for Republican nomination for congress in the 10th district, were announced yesterday by the county clerk's office. The canvass showed in the towns of Evanston, New Trier, Niles, and Northfield, the vote stood: Church, 8,230; Chindblom, 6,122; Simpson, 5,920.

No apparent change in the result was indicated by the figures. The police returns lumped city and country precincts, and the lack of separation left the official figures from the towns without a basis of comparison. Rival claims of gains are made by the opposing camps.

The election board estimates it will take a week before the canvass is complete of the 344 Chicago precincts in the district, which are scattered over nine wards. Official figures on Lake county gave Chindblom, 8,009; Simpson, 6,652; Church, 5,247. All three gained on these figures. In the fluctuations so far, Simpson has kept in the lead by 200 to 300 votes.

Rug Company Messenger Is Robbed of $2,130 Cash

Ernest B. Bell, a messenger, was carrying $2,130 and checks for $6,000 from the offices of the Olson Rug company at 2800 North Crawford avenue to a bank yesterday afternoon when three armed men held him up and robbed him. The robbery occurred in front of the rug plant and the bandits escaped in an automobile. Money orders to the amount of $309.90, which were in the bundle taken from Bell, were found in Humboldt park soon after.

HOSPITAL HEAD CITED TO FACE STATE CHARGES

Accused of Malpractice, Attempted Blackmail.

Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, owner of the Keystone hospital, 1623 North Kostner avenue, was cited yesterday to appear before the state medical board on May 6 on charges of malpractice and attempted blackmail. If convicted the physician may lose his medical license and his hospital license.

DR. L. K. EASTMAN [Mesler & Ames Photo.]

The complaint, drawn up by the state department of registration, charges that Dr. Eastman, in collusion with certain policemen, arranged to have victims of traffic accidents brought to his hospital, where he would engage legal counsel for them. Then, the complaint charges, the hospital staff deliberately neglected the injuries of the patients to assist the lawyers in suing the motorists responsible for large damages.

The complaint cites the cases of three patients, one of whom has since died, while a second had a leg amputated and a third is paralyzed. The alleged blackmail involved another physician, whom Dr. Eastman is alleged to have had arrested on a charge of performing an illegal operation, and who upon his acquittal sued Dr. Eastman for $75,000.

Charges in Accident Case.

The first case listed is that of Frank Pajewski, 18 years old, 2254 North Laramie avenue, who suffered a compound fracture of his right ankle when run down by a truck on Feb. 21, 1930. The complaint charges that Cragin police took Pajewski to the hospital, where Dr. Eastman engaged a lawyer for him.

For three weeks, the complaint charges, Pajewski was treated only with opiates and, when taken to the operating room, was unaware that his leg was to be amputated. He remained in the Keystone hospital, the complaint states, until the following July, when his mother forcibly had him removed to the Wesley Memorial hospital.

The complaint then sets forth that the youth's lawyer filed a personal injury suit for $21,000, of which $10,000 was paid in cash, the remainder being paid in monthly instalments of $500. Of the $10,000 cash, according to the complaint, the lawyer took $7,000. Dr. Eastman, it is charged, filed a bill of $1,000 for himself, $850 for a private nurse, and $860 for his hospital room.

Two Other Cases Cited.

Two other cases cited are those of Mrs. Agatha Janusz, 28 years old, 2516 North 74th avenue, Elmwood Park, who is now paralyzed, and Louis Rediger, 13 years old, 5446 Fullerton parkway, now dead. In the Rediger case, the complaint charges, a pelvic fracture was "intentionally neglected for the purpose of increasing or enhancing damages to be recovered by said patient in a civil suit against the ones responsible for his injury."

In the blackmail charge the department of registration expects to produce as prosecuting witness Dr. Clifton K. Timmons, 5713 Winthrop avenue, staff surgeon at the Illinois Masonic hospital. Cragin police arrested Dr. Timmons last Sept. 20 after an attaché of the Keystone hospital had telephoned Cragin station that a young woman there was accusing Dr. Timmons of performing an illegal operation upon her.

At a trial before Judge Samuel Trude in the Felony court the physician asserted that he had been framed with the aid of two policemen, John Sloan and Walter Scully of the Cragin district. Judge Trude dismissed the charge against Dr. Timmons, who then filed a $75,000 damage suit, naming Dr. Eastman and the two policemen.

The case of Lester Tilton, self-styled concer healer of Clinton, Iowa, who was scheduled to go on trial yesterday before Judge Rudolph Desort in Criminal court on charges of conspiracy to violate the medical practice act, was carried over to May 3 by agreement of counsel. Codefendants with Dr. Tilton are Dr. Joseph Duffy, 5755 North Clark street, and Harry de Joannis, a promoter, of 6049 Ridge avenue.

STORE OWNER SUED FOR SLANDER.

Ottawa, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Stanislaud Urbanowski, owner of a Peru department store, has been made defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed by Mrs. Margaret Nieslawski of Peru. According to Mrs. Nieslawski's attorneys the action is a slander suit.

TOY INDUSTRY SHOWS WHAT'S NEW FOR 1932

Exhibit Opened Here for Store Buyers.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Manufacturers in the $200,000,000 toy industry converted three floors of the Stevens hotel into a toyland yesterday and announced optimistically that "with prices down and quality up" they are looking forward to a banner year.

No children trooped into the exhibit halls to see the dolls and toy dogs, the kits of tools, miniature automobiles, magic chests, and little lead soldiers. The show, H. D. Clark of New York, acting secretary of the Toy Manufacturers' association, pointed out, is for adults only—for the buyers who will order the toys for next Christmas to be sold throughout the United States.

The Latest in Locomotives.

There were the latest reproductions of railroad locomotives; the kind already set up to run on an electrical track, or the kind that comes in pieces for the ambitious boy to put together. One can be built to scale from the plans of a real locomotive.

For the child who insists upon constructing his own toys there is a wide assortment of material. For instance, he will not need to depend upon the balloon man for his balloons. He can now make them himself at home with liquid rubber in the bright spring shades.

A toy soda fountain with electrical equipment is one of the features on display. Another is a magician's chest with the latest tricks and secrets.

The little boys may say that one doll looks just like another, but not the girls who will find the 1932 dolls under the Christmas tree. The baby doll is more popular than ever, and the character dolls more alluring. There are whole rooms of real furniture for the nursery.

Gardening Toys Plentiful.

From the number of gardening toys exhibited it is evident that young America is going agricultural. For the girls there are small greenhouses with real glass, and small pots for the plants they have grown from seed. There are spade and hoe sets, and small lawn mowers that really cut grass.

The very small toys have some new features this year. The Uncle Walt characters have been placed in automobiles and all kinds of vehicles on wheels. Rubber tires and bright metal work have been added to the tiny colored wagons, automobiles, airplanes, fire engines, and trucks.

The Chicago Toy show will continue through this week and into next. It is conducted by the Toy Manufacturers of America, of which T. S. Dowst of Chicago is president, and the Toy Buyers' association, of which J. F. Ebersold of Cleveland is president.

AUSTRALIA STATE DEVISES PLAN TO BEAT GARNISHEE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

SYDNEY, April 25.—Premier Lang of New South Wales has devised plans to evade the federal garnishee of state moneys by constituting the state treasury as bank, on which checks will be drawn for payment of state government accounts. It is believed that special legislation will be necessary to put this plan through, since it is said that this would amount to inflation by the issue of state currency.

A restricted form of inflation is needed, it is argued, if the government is to meet its ordinary internal obligations and if long continued this would mean, it is asserted, that food relief coupons and family endowment payments would become part of the currency.

UNIONS TO FIGHT NEW WAGE CUTS IN NEW ZEALAND

Charge Workers Make All the Sacrifices.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 25.—The government of New Zealand has slapped on a drastic censorship, but news seeping through from Great Britain's farthest south dominion indicates conditions there are growing more serious.

Members of the trades unions and various public servants' associations are making a determined fight to prevent any further cuts in wages, which were cut 10 per cent last June. The recent riots in Auckland served to indicate pointedly to the government the temper of the workers.

Unions Threaten Action.

Eighty thousand trade union workers and 30,000 civil servants were represented by delegates at a meeting at which the threat of a general strike was made because of the government's failure to take steps to stabilize the country's position. The workers feel they are being asked to make all the sacrifices.

New Zealand, like other countries which have embarked upon a process of reconstruction after a period of overborrowing, is finding the process long and difficult. Taxation is mounting rapidly. The workers, already paying better than 60 per cent in indirect taxation and now having to meet direct taxes on incomes of $720 a year, are also to be called upon to pay a jobless insurance levy of 5 cents on the dollar instead of one and a quarter cents, as hitherto. Trade, down by 45 per cent at last estimates, is still shrinking and there have been great increases in the number of unemployed through government reductions of staff.

Workers Take One Cut.

Workers and state employés last June expressed willingness to accept wage cuts if a determined effort were made to stabilize the country's finance and rents and interest were cut also.

Making an appeal to the country to follow the lead of the government in making the 10 per cent cut, Prime Minister George W. Forbes asked employers to pass the benefit of reduced wages on to the community. The workers now object that no benefits have been passed on and that capital seeks to maintain its earnings at as high a figure as ever. Thus the workers are in an ugly mood.

Trades unionists are among the most moderate of the labor movement and have consistently opposed the left wingers of the Alliance of Labor, which is run by a Scots immigrant, "Big Jim" Roberts, and their determination to take direct action is significant of a serious disturbance throughout the country.

Cabinet in Peril.

The Public Service association, official organization of the state employés, repudiates responsibility for the decision of the labor conference, at which it was not represented, but the state employés who were represented form the largest and most militant in the service, such as post-office workers and railway men. They have consistently worked hand in hand with the labor movement.

Disunity in the cabinet and the probable collapse of the coalition government between the Reform and United parties threaten to plunge the country into administrative chaos, and a general strike would thus precipitate a crisis at once.

Stories of strife in the cabinet and evidence of ill feeling between old rivals are frequently to be heard. Failure of the recent drive by the farmers for a higher exchange rate of from 20 to 25 per cent in place of the existing 10 per cent has led to the strong agricultural bloc in the cabinet determining that interest rates and rents must be reduced by at least 20 per cent. Plans are now being made to carry this into effect despite the opposition of W. Downie Stewart, minister of finance, who defeated the high exchange move.

The latest move illustrates the fluctuation of New Zealand politics. The coalition fought the election of last December on the cry that if elected "labor would repudiate" national debts, and government spokesmen have constantly declared that compulsory reduction of interest is repudiation.

Yet within the past few weeks a special committee set up to survey the budgetary situation has reported in favor of a conversion loan and an economic commission, while recommending the virtual abolition of true state services in many fields, has declared itself for a special 20 per cent tax on fixed incomes [which amounted to the same thing as a compulsory reduction of interest rates within the country], and the government, which previously talked much of the national credit, has now forgotten all about the national credit and has determined to prepare a plan to legislate reduction of rates into effect at once.

Fear Power of Farmers.

The new move is due less to fear of the labor threat than to the power of the farmers. The farmers' bloc is now all-powerful and is determined that its liabilities must be decreased. The primary aim of the government is not to stabilize the budgetary situation, but to relieve the primary producers. To popularize the move, reduction in rents has been added to the plan. So once more the country witnesses the curious spectacle, which has occurred so often in New Zealand history, of a supposedly conservative government outsocializing the Socialists.

Miss Nichols is gathering signatures to petitions urging foreign governments to send delegates to the International Congress of Women, which will be held in Chicago in conjunction with the 1933 World's Fair. Exposition officials announced yesterday that ground will be broken on Monday for the replica of the Golden Pavilion of Jehol.

GRAPE GROWERS ADVANCE PLAN TO REVISE DRY LAW

Would Ban Use of Fortifying Materials.

San Francisco, Cal., April 25.—(AP)—Representatives of nine thousand California grape growers today unanimously adopted a program advocating revision of the 18th amendment to permit the sale of naturally fermented beverages.

The program, drafted by Donald D. Conn, managing director of the California Vineyardists' association, calls for a national liquor plan to permit restricted manufacture of wines for use in homes and hotels, under certain supervisory conditions.

The use of fortifying material to increase the alcoholic content would be forbidden, limiting the strength to that produced by natural fermentation.

In his report, Conn declared the California grape growers had been "betrayed" by a reversal of policy on the part of the government in prohibition enforcement under which vinemaking in the home has been outlawed.

Burton A. Towne, president of the California Vineyardists' association, said:

"The report submitted by Mr. Conn is the most comprehensive and definite document ever presented for the grape growers. If recommendations he has made are carried into effect it will mean a new day and a renewed prosperity for the California vineyard industry."

Views Held by Wets.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Legalization of nationally fermented beverages, suggested by the director of the California Vineyardists association, Donald D. Conn, met little favor today with anti-prohibitionists in congress.

Representative Linthicum of Maryland, chairman of the house wet bloc, expressed the view that "congress will never agree to a change in the prohibition laws that favors one industry."

Secretary Hyde and the office of Attorney General Mitchell denied that Fruit Industries, Ltd., manufacturers of a grape concentrate "had its genesis as a result of conferences between the department of justice, the treasury and the department of agriculture in Washington."

Chairman Stone of the farm board, which has loaned approximately $3,000,000 to fruit industries, said the board did not "loan a penny" to that company "until it had been assured by the department of justice, the treasury and prohibition bureau that the grape concentrate business was perfectly legal."

Representative La Guardia of New York, secretary of the Republican wet bloc, said, "The noble experiment is a bust. I am only sorry that President Hoover hasn't the courage to say so now instead of waiting until after the conventions. After the voters decide in November we'll put an end to the problem real soon, anyhow—and we won't stop with the modification Mr. Donald D. Conn asks."

Delay Hearing of Charges Against 3 N. U. Students

Disorderly conduct charges against three Northwestern students who were arrested as uninvited guests in the home of an Evanston nurse Sunday were continued to Thursday by Magistrate Harry H. Porter yesterday when the nurse, Miss Ardith Ryan, 24 years old, 2219 Maple avenue, failed to appear. A subpoena was issued for her appearance. Police were called to Miss Ryan's home when she discovered intruders inside. Investigation disclosed the students nonchalantly frying bacon in the kitchen. They identified themselves as William McKay, Samuel Whitney, and Harry Armond.

2 KILLED, 1 HURT AS PLANE IN FOG STRIKES STUMP

Brookfield Woman Loses Life.

Sparta, Wis., April 25.—[Special.]—Mrs. William C. Schaffert, 21, of Brookfield, a suburb of Chicago, was killed and her husband was injured this afternoon when a plane piloted by William B. Adams, 27, also of Brookfield, crashed in a stump covered field near Norwalk, twelve miles southeast of Sparta. Adams' died of his injuries several hours later.

MRS. WILLIAM C. SCHAFFERT.

Schaffert and Adams were brought to St. Mary's hospital here, where the latter died. Schaffert's injuries are slight. He said they were flying from Stinson airport, in Brookfield, to La Crosse, Wis., when Adams became lost in fog and attempted to land. The plane, a Curtiss Robin cabin plane, crashed into a stump. Mrs. Schaeffert died almost instantly.

Schaffert is a filling station attendant. He and his wife reside with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Adams at 9347 Jefferson avenue, Brookfield. Adams, a trucking contractor, was unmarried and lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Adams, at 3540 Grand avenue, Brookfield. He held a private pilot's license, and had bought the plane last fall.

Schaffert's parents, his wife's mother, Mrs. Joseph Prezell, 3321 Park avenue, Brookfield, and Adams' parents, were notified and left Brookfield last night by train and automobile for Sparta.

The flight was Mrs. Schaffert's first, but her husband had flown with Adams before.

Banker, Pilot Die in Storm.

Havre, Mont., April 25.—(AP)—J. W. Schnitzler, 49, Froid, Mont., banker, and A. L. Hedberg, 24, his pilot, crashed to death in an isolated stream yesterday while flying through a rainstorm to Havre, Mont., for the annual inspection of their plane.

The wreckage was found in a woody island creek, 50 miles northwest of Malta, by Chris Maloney, a farmer.

Schnitzler was a state senator and Republican national committeeman. He was widely known as an aviation enthusiast.

The banker and pilot took off from Froid early yesterday.

Attorneys for receivers of closed banks yesterday got copies of the recent decision of the Illinois Supreme court on stockholder liabilities. The court held that stockholders are responsible for all debts incurred by the bank while they own stock and that the liability does not end when a stockholder sells his stock, but continues until the debt is paid by the bank. The decision was made in a case from Centralia, Ill.

The court held that a stockholder cannot be held liable for the liabilities of the bank incurred before he became a stockholder, nor for those incurred after he ceased to be a stockholder.

"If A buys stock in a state bank of the face value of $20,000," the decision explains, " and remains its owner for but one day and then sells and assigns the stock to B and during the day that A was the owner of the stock the bank incurred liabilities to the extent of $5,000, A's constitutional liability would not be $20,000, but he and his co-stockholders would be liable to the extent of $5,000 and if the indebtedness of $5,000 were subsequently satisfied then A's liability would no longer exist."

U. S. AMBASSADOR ACCEPTS RARE GERMAN HONOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TUEBINGEN, Germany, April 25.—The University of Tuebingen, one of the most famous of German universities, today paid tribute to America and her ambassador to Germany, Frederic M. Sackett.

The university, which was founded in the heart of beautiful Württemberg a few years before Columbus discovered America, presented the honorary degree of political science, the highest honor it has to convey, to Sackett in an impressive ceremony in the presence of the most famous men of south Germany and representatives of the German cabinet.

In the course of the centuries it has been in existence, Tübingen has dispensed only a few honorary titles, but because of his "great effort in alleviating economic problems the university has concluded that the American ambassador did signal work in singling out some of the causes of the present difficulties," and decided to honor him.

The rector of Tuebingen spoke of the Hoover moratorium as the "generous American measures of last June which would have been entirely able to remove the essential cause of the crisis from world economy" if they had been carried out as proposed by America.

Sackett, in reply, stressed the community of interest of Germany and America in great cultural problems.

At noon Ambassador and Mrs. Sackett were guests of honor of the university, and in the evening the ambassador gave the traditional "doktorschmaus," or doctor's feast, for the members of the university and all officials.

The German traffic minister put his own private parlor car at the disposal of the Sacketts for the trip to and from Tübingen. The ambassador and his wife will spend tomorrow in Stuttgart, where Württemberg authorities will banquet them at a castle on a hill overlooking the capital.

HITLER DEMANDS RULE IN PRUSSIA; CLAIMS IT'S HIS

Tells Present Cabinet It Must Get Out.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 25.—"After yesterday's election we have a mandate from the people of Germany. We will demand the right to form governments in Prussia and the other states in which we have won."

This was the official statement issued by Adolf Hitler's National Socialist [Fascist] party headquarters in Munich today.

"With 163 members in the Prussian diet, we as a single party are as strong as the entire Weimar coalition in power to date," the proclamation went on. "The government demands that we respect the laws of the constitution. If the government itself respects them it must resign, since the majority of the German people no longer are behind it."

Premier Braun to Resign.

The Prussian government is making no move to resign. Its backers state that the law provides that it shall remain in power until the old diet expires and the new one has elected its new president. Immediately after the president is elected, Premier Otto Braun will tender his resignation, it is said.

The republican parties still nurse the hope that the Hitlerites may not be able to nominate the president of the Prussian diet when it convenes in June. With their allies, the Nationalists, the German Peoples' party, and others the Hitlerites will have 203 seats, or just 9 less than the majority of the diet, which will total 422 seats.

To obtain a majority the National Socialists need the help of the Catholic Centrists, without whom no single cabinet in Prussia or the German reich has been able to operate since the proclamation of the German republic. They are the backbone of Germany's parliamentary life. The Centrists will have 67 seats.

Woo Catholic Centrists.

Although the Nazis started public life as opponents of the Catholic church, they have talked eloquently of Christianity in recent months. Today their Prussian leader, Wilhelm Kube, is seeking the Centrists as allies and meekly said that "we are willing to coöperate with whoever wants a national and ennobled Prussia, fired by a strong spirit of a sense of social justice."

The Centrists also announce their willingness to coöperate with "all parties willing to work for the good of the fatherland on the basis of the constitution."

They add carefully that "Centrists oppose all movements which tend to subject the state and the administration to the dictatorship of a single party, thus endangering quiet and order in the country and a safe national policy."

Seek to Retain Police Power.

The Centrists leaders met in Berlin tonight to discuss conditions under which they would be willing to cooperate with the Hitlerites to form a new Prussian government. They are seeking means of retaining control of Prussia's most powerful weapon, its police power, even in case of an alliance with the Hitlerites.

In order to be prepared for all emergencies in the event that the Prussian parties fail to reach a satisfactory agreement, the reich's government is considering the advisability of installing a "national commissary for the administration of Prussia" after the resignation of Premier Braun.

It has negotiated with the present mayor of Essen, Dr. Hans Bracht, as a possible candidate for this difficult post, but first the government will permit the parties to seek their own solution, at least for several weeks.

To shorten this period, the pro-Hitlerite Nationalists filed a motion with Premier Braun today demanding an immediate dissolution of the old diet.

FRENCH VIEW HITLER'S VICTORY AS A BOOST FOR PREMIER TARDIEU

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 25.—A reinforcement of French conservatism to the profit of the nationalists in the elections next Sunday was the forecast in political circles here today as the result of the partial victory of Adolf Hitler, national Socialist [Fascist] leader, in Germany yesterday. No immediate shift in the government's foreign policy is anticipated.

From a political standpoint the most important effect of the Hitler victory will be to strengthen the position of Premier Tardieu and weaken that of former premier, Edouard Herriot, in cabinet building negotiations after the elections—in the supposition that the elections generally will be inconclusive with a slight swing to the left as is now expected. The government press, without exception, is attempting to exploit the Prussian elections as electoral propaganda. They are stressing the sweeping victory of Hitler and the increased German menace.

DANCER TELLS ABOUT SUITOR IN SUICIDE INQUEST

Reveals His Gifts Before He Ended Own Life.

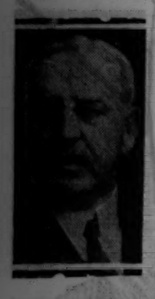
A taxi dancer yesterday revealed some of the secrets of her profession. She is Mrs. Charlotte Krupka, 26 years old, a tall, blue eyed blond, called as a witness at the inquest into the death of Howard Lee Clark, 37 years old, who shot himself to death Sunday near the door of Mrs. Krupka's apartment at 6315 Harper avenue.



WM. H. SEXTON.

A coroner's jury found that Clark committed suicide in a fit of insane jealousy brought on by the discovery that Mrs. Krupka, whom he knew as Sally Kane, was married. Letters left by Clark declared his infatuation for the dancer and gave his warning to all men to "stay away from the dens of vice known as taxi dance halls."

Dancer Tells Her Story.

"I started to work at the Midwest Dancing academy, 334 South Wabash avenue, last October," said Mrs. Krupka. "My husband was out of work. Some time in November, I met Clark. He danced with me several times. Then he bought $2 worth of tickets and danced them all with me and also slipped me a $10 tip."

"Do you often get such tips?" inquired Deputy Coroner Ray Conerty.

"Well, he gave me money," responded the taxi dancer. "He asked me to go to dinner with him. I used to meet him every Saturday night and we'd have dinner together, dancing together afterwards at the hall. I gave him my address and he wrote to me and I wrote to him."

"He asked you to marry him, didn't he?" inquired the deputy coroner. "Did you tell him you were already married?"

Shows Insurance Policy.

"I didn't say yes and I didn't say no," answered the witness. "He gave me money to help me out. I didn't ask him for it. Then, Saturday night, he showed me a $500 insurance policy with 'Sally Clark' as the beneficiary. He said I was the beneficiary when I married him as that would be my name. I told him then that I was married and couldn't marry him.'

The dancer testified that Clark then told her he would marry another taxi dancer he knew at the Clark-Erie Dancing school, now closed.

Clark, in his letters, wrote that the taxi dancer's clothing was shabby when he met her and that he spent much money to buy her new clothes. She was garbed, at the inquest, in a smart tan hat, black fur-trimmed coat, tan stockings and red slippers.

Alfred T. Krupka, her husband, testified that he knew nothing of his wife's affair with Clark and did not know she had been accepting money and presents from him.

"She told me that this dancing place was respectable," said Krupka.

A letter written by the dancer to Clark was read to the jury. She informed Clark in the letter that she was sick and penniless and would be forced to go to a hospital.

Gentzel List Not Prepared.

Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel, who asserted last week that he would send a list of sixteen open taxi dance halls to the state's attorney, said yesterday that he had not yet prepared the list. Judge Gentzel issued injunctions protecting several such halls, one of which he recently dissolved.

Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton, accused by Judge Gentzel of being responsible for the long delay in dissolving injunctions protecting the halls, declared yesterday that the court records in all cases showed that Judge Gentzel himself had referred the cases to masters in chancery, thus causing long delays.

State's Attorney Swanson said that the regulation of the dance halls was usually handled by the police. Regarding Judge Gentzel's statement that a list of open places would be sent to the state's attorney's office, he said:

"If I can be shown that any state law is being violated in these places, I will be glad to act immediately."

U. S. Joins in Campaign.

The federal government yesterday joined in the drive against taxi dance halls by arresting Steve Zvonon and Edward Maday, proprietors of the Goofer-Feathers Pleasure club, a taxi dance hall at 853 Elston avenue. The two men were charged with circulating pluggers advertising the dance hall which contained the words of popular songs in violation of the copyright laws. Assistant U. S. District Attorney Edward A. Fisher said that arrests would be made in the cases of all dance halls using similar methods to boost business.

LEAGUE CALLS ON JAPAN TO GIVE AN ACCOUNT OF SELF

Little Powers Insist on Evacuation.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, April 25.—The league of nations faces a difficult moment tomorrow, when the assembly's committee of nineteen will meet to see whether its resolution demanding that Japan evacuate Shanghai has been fulfilled.

Since this resolution was voted last month, Sir Miles W. Lampson, British minister to China, and the Japanese have agreed on a new formula, which the small league powers consider as not at all fulfilling the assembly's resolution. This new formula leaves ambiguous the very point in the resolution which the small powers here want made clear—namely, that an organized world, as represented by the league of nations, and no Japan shall decide the time for the Shanghai evacuation.

Britain Backs Jap Scheme.

The British are undertaking to show the committee of nineteen that the new formula ought to be followed The small powers, who have continually been forcing the hands of their big brothers, met this morning in indignation and decided to insist that the assembly's wish, to which everybody but the Japanese agreed, be fulfilled.

The Chinese are loudly insisting, with the support of the Spaniards, Norwegians and other small peoples on a public meeting. They say they have accepted the committee's resolution and want to hear what the Japanese have to say about that, and not about the Anglo-Japanese proposal on Shanghai.

On the other hand, the Japanese are threatening not to appear at the public meeting if they are to be badgered by the Chinese again. The small powers are asking themselves if the Japanese have the right, as members of the league, to refuse to appear.

Stimson Entertains Peer.

Secretary of State Stimson, who every one insists is here primarily to use his influence in a Sino-Japanese settlement, tonight dined with Lord and Lady Hailsham at his house, Bessinge. Lord Hailsham is secretary for war in the British cabinet, which fact has not passed unnoticed here. Early in the day Stimson saw Tsuneo Matsudaira, Japanese delegate to the league.

The disarmament conference has now come more or less to a halt pending the French elections on May 1 and 8 and the delegates are more or less taking stock. The greatest curiosity centers on Stimson. They are inclined to ask why he came. It is felt that aside from his interest in the Sino-Japanese scrap, he has taken pains to indicate to a number of chief delegates that naval disarmament is not a question to be reopened here.

Insists Pacts Stay Intact.

Failing to get the French and Italians to complete the London naval treaty, he has made clear that neither the London nor the Washington treaty is to be tampered with.

The insistence of the Russians here on the importance of their preparation for possible trouble on the border of Manchuria has excited close attention. Their claims that the whole five year plan has been diverted to armament manufacture, that supplies are already stored and bombing planes concentrated in the Vladivostok region and that they are ready for anything, are made in such profusion that nobody can ignore them.

The league has learned that Russian consular authorities and railway people in Manchuria have formally refused to supply information to the league's inquiry commission there on the grounds that they do not know to what use the information will be put.

JAPANESE BOMB RAILWAY BRIDGE NEAR SHANGHAI

Army of 50,000 Chinese Massed at Hangchow.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 25.—Chinese newspaper reports tonight said a Japanese airplane had dropped three bombs near a railway bridge at Sungkiang, about twenty miles southwest of Shanghai, on the Shanghai-Hangchow railway. The reports said the bombs missed the bridge but destroyed a farmer's house nearby.

Japanese authorities refused to comment on the incident but expressed concern regarding a heavy mobilization of Chinese troops at Hangchow. It was stated that the Chinese have five divisions in that city, or more than 50,000 troops.

Amoy Alarmed by Rumors.

AMOY, China, April 25.—(AP)—Alarm swept through the native populace tonight when sensational reports were circulated to the effect that local communists were planning to create disorders within the city, now threatened by the Red army of Gen. Sun Liang-Chen.

Investigation revealed no basis for these reports, but both the Chinese and the foreign authorities increased their precautions.

The Chinese landed a large detachment of marines from gunboats off shore, thus augmenting their military patrols throughout the city. Guards and lookouts on foreign men of war in the harbor were strengthened.

U. S. Warships Stand By.

Additional American, Japanese and French gunboats steamed into port. The American warcraft here include three gunboats and four submarines, and a submarine mother ship is en route from Chefoo. All told, there are 24 ships of war of various nations in the harbor.

Advices from Chaochow tonight said the communist army was moving to the north, apparently apprehensive of an attack by Cantonese troops. Amoy authorities said this northward movement should lessen the danger here.

Refugees continued to pour into the city. The streets were congested with many thousands of safety seekers, and every available shelter was taken.

Keep 4 Divisions in Manchuria.

TOKIO, April 25.—(AP)—The Thirty-ninth Japanese army brigade, recently ordered to return to its normal post in Corea, has been instructed to remain in Manchuria indefinitely because of the growth of the insurgent movement there, it was announced today. This means Japan will keep four full divisions in Manchuria, besides auxiliary troops.

The Chinese troops under Gen. Li Hai-tsing, who raided Sanchao yesterday, had retreated northward by the time Japanese troops arrived there to oppose them. Although they were cleared from the railway line, traffic on the southern branch of the Chinese Eastern has not yet been restored because several considerable stretches of track were destroyed.

An international train which was reported to have been seized by the rebels returned to Harbin today with all the passengers safe.

Movie Director Arraigned on Tax Evasion Charge

Hollywood, Cal., April 25.—[Special.]—Edwin Carewe, motion picture producer, was given two weeks in which to plead to a charge of evading payment of $108,547 income tax when he appeared today before United States District Judge Paul McCormick. The motion picture director was indicted on four counts, charging evasions for four years, 1926 to 1929.

CUTS IN RENTALS HOLD TENANTS IN THEIR OLD FLATS

May Moving Day to Be Unusually Quiet.

With May moving day only one week off, the migratory spirit of Chicagoans appears to be below normal. Real estate agents said yesterday that they are renewing a greater proportion of leases this year than usual, and moving firms report less work than last year.

One large real estate agency renewed 64 per cent of its leases during March of this year, compared to renewals of only 51 per cent in March of last year. In February there were 60 per cent renewals, compared to 45 per cent last February. As to new renting, that firm rented 493 apartments this March, compared to 514 apartments in March of last year.

Increase in Vacancies.

In anticipation of moving day agents said that rentals have been reduced between 15 to 20 per cent in some districts. One year leases are being obtained from tenants, although requests for 30 and 60 day cancellation clauses have increased.

Vacancies have increased 3 per cent as of the end of March, compared to the end of March last year, according to one firm. This increase in the face of a virtual cessation of building, was laid to the doubling up of families. The Chicago Real Estate board estimates there are 60,000 "doubled up" families in Chicago.

The move to flatten this moving day peak by staggering the lease dates throughout the year, instead of around May 1, has not progressed noticeably in the lower price properties, according to rental agencies.

Warns of Racketeers.

A. W. Meyer, official of one of the large moving concerns and a member of the Movers' Association of Chicago, warned movers yesterday to be on their guard against "racketeering" moving outfits. He explained that the big moving firms of the city have adopted a uniform hourly rate which is fair to the public and to the companies. The rate is $5 an hour for loading and unloading vans, with 2 men to the van, plus $1 a mile between addresses.

KINSEY ORDERED TO PAY KIN OR FACE CONTEMPT

Called to Court About Judgment Case.

Carl D. Kinsey, president of the Chicago Musical college, was given until May 9 yesterday by Circuit Judge Thomas Taylor to pay $16,000 on a judgment obtained by his stepdaughter, Mrs. Letitia Vance Bushman, on penalty of citation for contempt of court.

Mrs. Bushman appealed to the Circuit court from a Probate court order under which Kinsey was made administrator, charging that he had forced her through threats of turning her from his home to assign to him her mother's estate. Her mother, Mrs. Edwina Vance Kinsey, was killed in 1923 in the wreck of the Twentieth Century Limited at Forsyth, N. Y. A large part of the estate consisted of a $20,000 settlement made by the railroad company for Mrs. Kinsey's death.

History of Case Told.

Judge George Fred Rush sustained the appeal of Mrs. Bushman, ordering the estate turned back to her. Kinsey took the case to the Appellate court where Judge Rush's ruling was affirmed, and the case was ordered remanded for a final ruling upon two disputed items in the administrator's accounts. After a hearing Judge Taylor entered a final judgment order of $28,581 in favor of Mrs. Bushman and directed Kinsey to pay $16,000 immediately.

Mrs. Bushman and her attorney, Charles R. Holton, appeared yesterday before Judge Taylor and filed a motion to show cause why Kinsey should not be held in contempt. Mrs. Bushman, who is living at 5525 South State street, told Judge Taylor that her husband, Edward, a salesman, is out of work and that they are poverty-stricken. She has received no payment from Kinsey, she said.

Says Kinsey Lacks Cash.

Attorney George L. Schein, representing Kinsey, told the court that his client has not cash at present, and that to convert securities which he holds in the present market would cause him a serious loss. Judge Taylor continued the hearing to May 9 on Kinsey's promise that he would attempt to obtain some cash by that time.

IMPROVEMENT BOARD CUTS ITS COST $1,550,200

President B. F. Lindheimer of the board of local improvements announced yesterday that since he took office a year ago he had effected economies which will make it possible to operate his office for $1,550,200 less than the annual cost at the rate of expenditure under the old city administration when it terminated last April.

The subway bureau has been reduced from 158 employés with a monthly pay roll of $46,144 to 11 employés costing $4,408 a month, an annual saving of $500,832, and reduction of the staff made possible a reduction of the space rented in the Civic Opera building for the bureau, which will save the city an added $34,548 a year in rent, Mr. Lindheimer said.

There are now 335 positions provided for in the 1931 budget at an annual salary total of $920,820, which have been left vacant, and on May 1 the remaining 42 temporary appointees in the board office will be dismissed, giving an added annual salary saving of $89,000, Mr. Lindheimer said.

5 DEAD, 20 HURT AS STORM HITS THREE STATES

Doctors Use Plane to Aid Tornado Victims.

Memphis, Tenn., April 25.—[Special.]—Tornadoes sweeping across Shelby county north of Memphis, which is the county seat, today caused the deaths of five persons and injuries to twenty others. Property damage was extensive.

Authorities here believe that the tornado death toll may grow as more complete reports are received. The tornadoes also crossed portions of northern Alabama and eastern Arkansas.

The dead are: Mrs. T. J. Dale, 65 years old, who resided on a farm near Kerrville; and four Negroes, Robert Harris and Kethel Adams of Millington; Richard Spigee, 8, and an unidentified man, both of Rosemark.

Ambulances were sent to the storm wrecked area from Memphis and the injured were taken to a hospital at Brunswick. Several physicians used an airplane to get to the hospital.

A hurried investigation disclosed that twelve Negro residents of Millington were severely injured when their homes were hurled down upon them. Near the same village Mrs. Perry Duringer, 23 years old, wife of a farmer, was critically injured. She was carried more than 200 feet by the wind before she struck the ground.

At Osceola, Ark., two cotton gins were wrecked and several persons were injured. At Portersville, Ala., houses were wrecked and crops destroyed. Damage was also reported at Bowling Green, Ky., and in Simpson county, Mississippi.

Boiler Blast Wrecks Silk Plant; 2 Killed, 1 Missing

PAVIA, Italy, April 25.—(AP)—Two persons were killed, two injured, and one was missing after a boiler explosion wrecked the Snia viscosa silk factory here today. About 2,500 persons were thrown out of work temporarily.

GAS EXPLOSION SINKS COAST GUARD BOAT; 7 OF CREW INJURED

New London, Conn., April 25.—[Special.]—An explosion in the engine room of the coast guard patrol boat CG-290 today injured seven men, five of them seriously.

The blast occurred just as the vessel had finished taking on gasoline and is believed to have been caused by the accumulation of gas fumes. The boat sank, with its center demolished.

The injured are Boatswain A. C. Cornell, commander; George Austin, Andrew A. Rhude, Paul Schuler, Allen W. Webb, members of the crew, and W. R. Harris, an employé of the gasoline company that furnished the craft with fuel.

The CG-290 has figured prominently in coast guard operations against liquor smugglers.

APPEALS COURT UPHOLDS FLOOD CONTROL RULING

The justices of the Appellate court yesterday returned an opinion in which they held that the former Republican mayor could be called to account for an alleged misapplication of the $139,000 collected in 1927 for Mississippi flood sufferers only by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom. The ruling upheld the decision of Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel, who sustained a demurrer by the defendant to a suit brought by Charles S. Smith, a taxpayer and contributor of $50 to the fund.

The suit named the former mayor, Richard W. Wolfe, his commissioner of public works, and James W. Breen, former assistant corporation counsel, the trustees of the fund, as defendants, and asked an accounting and the appointment of a receiver. Smith charged that $103,000 of the money had been diverted for political campaign purposes and the rest of the money had never been distributed among the flood victims.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE ECONOMY BILL.

A vote is expected within the next few days on the retrenchment proposals prepared for the house by the economy committee, of which Mr. McDuffie of Alabama is chairman. Estimates differ as to the amount of the savings provided in the bill. Some run as high as $600,000,000. Others are as low as $170,000,000. The committee itself claims no more than $250,000,000.

Whatever the figure may be, it is plainly inadequate. Six hundred million is better than $170,000,000, but is still far from the billion dollar mark which congress ought to take as its goal.

The economy bill can be regarded as acceptable only if it can be shown that the proposed economies are to be genuine and not the product of bookkeepers' manipulations; and under no circumstances can the bill be accepted as the last word which congress will say in the matter of economy at this session. This bill must be merely the point of departure for a much more substantial attack on federal waste and extravagance. The bill may be presumed to contain a few of the more obvious economies. If it is an interim measure, intended to assure the nation that congress is determined to push the work of budget trimming to completion as rapidly as possible, the bill will be well received by the country. If congressmen are under the impression that this measure is all that they are expected to accomplish by way of economy at this session, they have a lot to learn.

CITIZENS DEMAND TAX REDUCTION.

There are signs that the people of Milwaukee and Wisconsin are going to do something about the taxes that are threatening to overwhelm them. Within a week there have been two significant movements. One was the direct warning to the Milwaukee county supervisors from the real estate men that they would not tolerate the inevitable increase in taxes which would follow further spending at the present rate and the consequent alliance of a group of civic minded societies to back up this warning.

The other was the organization of a state tax alliance which grimly announces that it will function as a fact finding body to reduce tax gathering and spending to terms intelligible and impressive to every man who pays them. This group is represented by substantial directors in each important population center.

It is proceeding on the theory that if every citizen realizes how much tax he actually pays, whether direct or indirect, he will be so stunned that when he recovers he will unite with them in demanding a return in government to essentials only.

The formation of the two groups is important in showing an awakening tax consciousness. Each sees further than a mere reduction of wages of public employés.

They are demanding a revision of governmental activities and the casting off of such elaborations as are not truly essential. Neither group has existed long enough to have seen any accomplishments. Each seems determined, and if their strength is not dissipated and their interest diverted into unimportant issues they can be important factors in restoring their bewildered community to composure and in averting insolvency.

R. O. Wipperman in his Wisconsin Tax Primer sees clearly the problem of tax reduction when he asks: "If a family of five persons in Wisconsin was well and sufficiently governed in 1912 at a cost of $114.35, what is there about that family today that it must have $440.55 worth of government?" He then answers his own question, continuing: "If it is admitted that we must have all the public frills, furbelows, social service and paternalism that are a part of present day government, there is little hope for any reduction in expenditure. If, on the other hand, it is admitted that only actually necessary public activities should be engaged in, and then only in the order of their importance and according to the ability of the people to pay, a material reduction in public expenditures and in taxes will follow."

A reduction in expenditures is never easy and only when the voice of the public is louder than the voice of the special pleader is it possible.

These two groups, which are in nowise in opposition to each other, are centers about which the public voice can unite and make itself heard for tax reduction in a demand that is greater than any group now calling for public money for a purpose in which it is selfishly interested.

That they were formed at this time is proof of the growing awakening of citizenship to the knowledge that the price it pays for government is primarily responsible for its economic dilemma and proof of a determination to reduce the heavy load under which Milwaukee and all other cities are now staggering.

PROGRESS FOR RAILROADS.

The new eighteen hour schedule for the Broadway Limited of the Pennsylvania and the Twentieth Century of the New York Central is evidence, we hope, that the railroads of the country realize that faster passenger transport is required of them in modern conditions of competition. It is true that other trains have had an hour added to their running time, but these are not extra fare trains and the change is probably made to accommodate and increase intermediate service. As the position of the railroads is strengthened, schedules should be generally shortened, for railroad management can hardly fail to realize that one of their strongest cards in competition with the new agencies of transport is speed. The western roads have been leading in this improvement of service, having shortened the time to the coast by many hours.

Another evidence of new railroad enterprise is air conditioning—that is, the provision of cleaned and cooled air for passenger cars—a great step forward in American railroading which should be adopted as fast as the means of the railroads permit. Like speed, it is an advantage which the railroads can exploit against motor transport, and will give travel by rail a comfort it has never had before.

If the railroads can be relieved from excessive taxation and the restrictions of excessive regulation so that they can accumulate the funds necessary to financial security and development, the traveling and shipping public may expect the benefits of an improved rail transportation. If this prospect were foreseen more clearly by the public the restrictive regulations which a mistaken public policy and narrow politics have induced it to support would be repudiated. The improvements in rail transport which the public needs can be had if it becomes good politics to encourage railroad initiative rather than to shackle and discourage it. The railroad builders of the past were mighty men, but they committed mistakes which cost not only the railroads but the public heavily in public enmity and restrictive legislation. But they are gone, and it is time for a more constructive, a broader and more farseeing policy toward the railroads. In the interest of the public they must be freed from undue restrictions and permitted to accumulate the means necessary to efficiency and progress in every enterprise, the backbone of the nation's transportation.

SURVIVORS OF THE YOUNG REPUBLIC.

J. Warren Keifer died last week at the age of 96 in Springfield, O. He went into the civil war as a major in the Third Ohio infantry. He fought in twenty-seven battles and was wounded four times. He came out of the war a major general. He was elected to congress and was speaker of the house of representatives in the Forty-seventh congress. In the Spanish war he was again in uniform as a major general of volunteers and after the war he was again in congress for three terms. He was the first citizen of his home town, a legend to the younger generations, an exemplar of old time dignities with his Socratic beard, his dress coat, and his wide spread of white shirt front.

American life will have other periods of heroic mold, no doubt, and yet none precisely like that through which such men as Gen. Keifer lived. They were the people of the breaking shell. The world was very young when they began life. They were in the doorway, with valleys and heights before them. An infant experiment in a skeptical world went through turmoil and danger and came out sound. They fought for it, served it, and filled their ripe lives with memories of its past in full sight of its accomplishments. The survivors of Gen. Keifer are few, but, let it be hoped, their work is imperishable.

ENEMIES WITHIN THE RANKS.

A veteran of the late war who confesses to having sent threatening letters to Rosa Raisa, in an attempt to extort money, and who is charged with forging signatures to checks in payment of veteran loans, alleges that he was shell shocked.

As an excuse for delinquencies shell shock has done a lot of service, but as an alibi it is getting pretty thin, like some other appeals to the emotion of patriotism which offend self-respecting service men. It is inevitable that in exceptional cases war service should be exploited for personal gain in money or notoriety, and this hurts the cause of the deserving veteran unjustly, especially as it tends to increase as the soldier's service recedes into the past. Men like this extortionist and forger give a sharp edge to Dr. Johnson's epigram, that patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel, the only opinion of Johnson quoted by pacifists or radicals. But the minority which exploits war service as a private racket in ways less obvious is exploiting the soldier's credit also and doing a greater disservice to his good name and just claims to the nation's honor and gratitude.

Editorial of the Day

[Peoria Transcript.]

One of those "it is said" stories in a Chicago newspaper announces that speakeasies in that city have been given orders by city authorities, based on information from federal sources, to prepare to close their doors during the Republican national convention, scheduled for Chicago in June. The newspaper discants upon information it says it has received from bootleggers, who have been informed that President Hoover wants Chicago to be dry when the Grand Old Party goes into action to nominate its standard bearer for the 1932 campaign.

Manifestly, stories of this kind are not reliable. Their publication may be suspected of being the result of journalistic desire or the result of some reporter's canvass among speakeasy friends. Nevertheless, if there be any truth in the yarn, it suggests that the President has made a blunder in letting his wishes in the matter be known.

He is the executive head of the government. A word to the prohibition enforcement bureau should have been sufficient to mobilize in Chicago an army of dry agents. They could close thousands of speakeasies in a few days. If the President wants his party's convention to be held amid Sahara surroundings, he can have what he wants, but he must endure the wrath of delegates who expect to use the convention as an excuse for a convivial period in which, while serving their party and their country, they may also be served by the bellboys.

The fact there are enough saloons in Chicago to justify printing a yarn about their closing is the only interesting aspect of the story. Perhaps, considering the fact that Chicago has secured the major party conventions and expects to offer a world exposition unrivaled in the history of such institutions, this has something to do with the sudden interest in community morals.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

COME ON, YOU SPELLBINDERS!

Eminent financiers, w. k. captains of industry, and Big Butter 'n' Egg men have tried in vain to cheer us up. What this country needs is the campaign spellbinders. The Democrats and the G. O. P. ought to hurry up their conventions, nominate their candidates, adopt their platforms, and turn loose the campaign oratory. Then confidence would come back on the jump and anybody suspected by his family or his neighbors of hoarding would be tarred and feathered. Come on, you spellbinders. Tell us we're the richest, greatest, grandest, most glorious lot of birds the sun ever shone on. Tell us that after the November election we'll have so much money we'll tell the janitor to sweep the damn stuff out and throw it in the alley. Tell us that we can order a plush lined seven passenger limousine two days after the election and put a radio in every room, fourteen new electric ice boxes in every kitchen, a diamond ring for mamma, a silk hat for papa, a sealskin coat for Laura, an aeroplane for Uncle Bill, and tons of candy for each and every child. Come on, you spellbinders. Tell us that your side, when it wins, will rush around the corner and grab Prosperity out by the hind leg and make him beg for mercy and promise to be good forever after. Bear down hard on the prosperity stuff, fellows. It went big four years ago and there's life in the old dog yet. You may think we voters are fed up on the prosperity talk. Oh, nothing like it. Feed it to us and we'll lap it up like a cat lapping cream. It's always good if you holler it loud enough. Prosperity is still the best seller you spellbinders have got. We're gluttons for punishment, we sovereign voters. Say it often enough and loud enough, crack it to us from every stump and soapbox and loud speaker and we'll eat it alive without salt, pepper, or vinegar. Come on, you spellbinders, let's go.

WALLS.

Bruising my wings again and again
Against them, I cried to be free
From the walls, familiar to every man,
That encompassed and hindered me.

"The world of the bound is but half a world,
Forever incomplete;
What limitless spheres belong to the free
For their nomad wings and feet."

But one of these answered me: "Prize your walls!
Your steadfast walls that bar and bless;
For the world of the wholly free is this—

ADELAIDE LOVE.

LOZ ONGLAIZE seeks to get rid of her bone dry mayor so as to allow a little more real hospitality in the way of dinners and such when the rah-rah boys and girls arrive for the Olympic games. But so far as we have been able to notice bone dry mayors don't seem to have any appreciable effect in repressing genuine old time conviviality whenever the occasion arises anywhere. If Loz Onglaize claims to need a change of mayors in order to have cocktails, for instance, at her dinners we fear she is kidding us, as they say. Or probably kidding herself. We Americans are inclined to do that.

HERR HITLER seems to be forging right ahead. Anyhow, he makes the first page all around the world three times as often as Mussolini. The Duce will have to rattle his sword some more, throw another scare into France, and put ten more press agents on the pay rolls if he wants to keep up with that go-getter Hitler lad.

SPRING SONG.

Now is come the gentle spring.
Flowers bloom and birdies sing.
Poets spend their leisure time
Putting so-called thoughts in rhyme.
Housewives, in a mood ecstatic,
Scrub the cellar and the attic.
How I wish some one could find
Some way to houseclean the mind!

MARJORIE F. W.

WADING BREATHLESSLY through the news to find out what great things our Mr. Stimson has accomplished at the Geneva disarmament conference, we find that he has just finished a game of golf. Maybe they're settling the thing that way. Every time the representative of one nation beats bogie his nation gets the right to add one more battleship. Or sink a battleship, whichever way the rules say. It's a grand idea and we begin to have some hope that the disarmament convention is going to get somewhere after all.

AMERICAN ENGINEERS working for the Reds who have married soviet ladies are said to be unable to get their wives away from Russia. Which might be regarded as infamous cruelty on the part of the Reds or helpful and kindly aid to their American employés. It all depends on the point of view.

OUTLINE FOR AN AMERICAN EPIC.

Let it be vibrant, charged with life and hope,
Not ineffectual as of doddering age.
Let it be full, resplendent in its scope,
Not half apologetic on each page.
Of courage foremost may it be attuned,
Not the small, timid voice of hesitant fear,
The shrinking from the little hurt or wound,
The clinging to material things so dear.
Let it recount the toil and sacrifice
And praise the principles that there lay deep,
Held through the stress the structure that should rise,
Sing of the pledges that were made to keep.
A tone of victory for the ultimate good,
Not a mere threnody from sorrow's pen,
Nor yet a boastful wording blatant, rude,
Yet couched in phrases for a breed of men.
So let it sing of vigor born of youth
And rest its worth upon the plinth of truth.

DIRTY AIR.

THE lung is the only part of the body that absorbs and stores much dirt. A man's skin can be unspeakably dirty, yet if he be put in a warm bath and plenty of soap applied with a scrubbing brush he will emerge reasonably free from soil. However, if a man keeps his skin filthy rather habitually, some dirt gets so firmly imbedded that not even a Turkish bath can get rid of it. He acquires a mild tatoo with dirt.

But even the dirtiest skin is clean in comparison with the lungs, if we count in the dirt content of the bronchial glands into which the dirt of the lungs is sewered. No other organ of the body picks up and stores any dirt. The digestive tract of a dirt eater, cleaned of its loose content, is a clean tube.

In view of the tendency of the lungs to pick up dirt, a proper regard for perfect health indicates the desirability of having clean air to breathe. Health experts know this. As a first step to getting it they have worked to invent machines to measure the dirt in the air. At least six are on the market. The best of these, according to the industrial hygiene division of the public health service, is one invented by Greenburg and Smith of the service ten years ago Having compared it with the others they have been using it almost wholly for several years. It is available for men who operate factories and for health officials and others who want to know just how dirty is the air that their people must breathe.

A recent report by the service gives the comparative dirtiness of the air in several types of shops. The figures quoted are merely to serve as bases of comparison. The scientific detail is not included.

Woodworking shops	1.5
Grinding and polishing shops	4.8
Silverware manufacturing—
Nonexposed group	0.8
Exposed group	6.3
Cement manufacturing	26.0

The machine has been used to disclose how much chromic acid there is in the air of chrome plating establishments. A report on the lead content of air in various locations indicates that industrial workers and people living in cities are getting a variable dosage of that substance. The amount of lead in the air of various places was as follows:

Factories where storage batteries are made	3.4 to 160
Cracker and cake factories	.37
Underwear factories	.35
Shirt and overall factories	.28
Machine shops [brass]	.24
Retail grocery store	.23

EVIDENCE OF DAMAGE.

L. E. J. writes: What are calcifications of the lungs? Are they dangerous?

REPLY.

Lime is deposited in bronchial glands and sometimes in old cavities caused by consumption. The calcification is not dangerous. In fact, it is a protecting process. However, calcification in the lungs, arteries, and some other places does not take place except in organs that are already pretty well shot up.

HAVE TONSILS REMOVED.

L. M. P. writes: I am 56 years old and not in very good physical condition. Am just able to get about after a hard attack of quinsy, and my tonsils are in bad shape. Am I too old to have the knife used on them, or would radium be the right method to use?

REPLY.

Your tonsils can be removed by either method. There is some danger of hemorrhage following operation, but it can be prevented. If not prevented it can be stopped. People older than 56 have had tonsils successfully removed.

SHINGLES NOT DANGEROUS.

Mrs. L. M. writes: What is shingles? Is it dangerous? What is the cause?

REPLY.

Physicians call this disease intercostal herpes. It is caused by infection of the roots of the nerves that follow the ribs. The infection may be with a virus, or with some of the cocci. The disease is a form of neuralgia and, while it is very painful, it is not dangerous.

EXERCISES WON'T DO IT.

G. L. writes: Can you give me a set of exercises for curing bowlegs? I have this trouble and am anxious to cure myself and will go to any amount of trouble if necessary. I am 17 years old and weigh 135 pounds.

REPLY.

You will waste your time trying to straighten bowlegs by exercises.

PAVEMENT REPAIRED.

Chicago, April 22. — [Friend of the People.]—I am writing in regard to a hole in front of my place on Cicero avenue. This hole has caused us a lot of trouble such as broken windows, mud splattered on windows, and people passing by are often splashed with dirty water and mud. We reported this to the city and they filled it in with ashes which were soon scattered around, making the condition worse. E. L. M.

Report is made that necessary repairs have been made to pavement in front of the writer's home and same is now in good condition. JOSEPH J. BUTLER, Superintendent of Streets.

LANDLORD'S LIEN.

Chicago, April 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A and B sign a lease jointly. They vacated owing two months' rent. A made out a bill of sale to C [his uncle] ten days before judgment was served. C took possession and moved the furniture to his apartment. A citation was issued for A and B, the writ being returned unsatisfied within the ninety days. Another writ was issued which has not been served on either A or B. There has been no attachment, levy or execution of judgment on A or B, one year expiring since. Judgment was issued. 1. Would a confessed judgment lien be prior to a bill of sale made ten days before the serving of judgment where possession is taken before the writ is served? 2. If A included his uncle as a creditor in bankruptcy would it affect the bill of sale in any way? 3. Does the lien of a landlord cease if no seizure, attachment or levy has been made after one year from date of serving judgment on personal property? 4. Is a landlord considered a judgment creditor in the bankruptcy court where no attachment has been made to secure the lien in chattels of tenants within the year after the issue of execution judgment? 5. What is meant by "a landlord has no lien for rent in this state except such as given by statute"?

A. H.

1. It seems probable that on appropriate court proceedings the bill of sale could be set aside as a fraud on creditors.

2. Yes, in the sense that this would indicate that the transfer to the uncle had not been for cash.

3. We do not understand what lien you refer to.

4. If he has a judgment he is a judgment creditor. We do not understand the purpose of your question.

5. The Illinois statute authorizes a landlord to levy a distress warrant and this step would give him a lien. Until he takes this step or some similar step he has no lien

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CHINA-JAPAN WAR, 1895

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A special dispatch to the Pall Mall Gazette from Wei Hai Wei says that, notwithstanding the desperate nature of the fighting which has occurred there, but little damage has been done. The dispatch adds that Gen. Tai of the Chinese army committed suicide in a moment of anger because of the desertion of a number of his subordinates.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 13.—News was received here of the surrender of the Chinese forts and warships at Wei Hai Wei. The surrender is complete and the Japanese are in full possession of the city. It is officially announced that Capt. Nuros, in command of the Japanese squadron at Wei Hai Wei, reports that the Chinese sent a white flag to the Japanese fleet on Feb. 12. With it came a message from Admiral Ting of the Chinese navy offering to surrender the city and his vessels, provided that the lives of the soldiers, crews, and foreigners were secured.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A Shanghai dispatch says it is reported from Tientsin that the Chinese warships Shen Yuen, Chin Yuen, and Kwang Ting, reported sunk at Wei Hai Wei, are still afloat. The same report also says the forts on Liao Tung Tao island are still in possession of the Chinese.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 15.—It is reported here that Li Hung Chang and Prince Kung, an uncle of the emperor of China, have been appointed Chinese peace envoys to Japan.

YOKOHAMA, Feb. 17.—A dispatch from Field Marshal Oyama, in command of the Japanese military forces at Wei Hai Wei, announcing the surrender of the Chinese, says that Admiral Ting and two other officers committed suicide after addressing a letter from the Chinese flagship accepting the Japanese demand for surrender. The Chinese soldiers garrisoning the forts and sailors of the fleet will be taken beyond the Japanese lines and liberated and the captured officers and the foreigners will be conveyed away by the Japanese ships before they are given their liberty.

28 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 26, 1904.

SEOUL.—A mine laid by retreating Russians in the mountain pass south of Wiju exploded while the Japanese infantry were passing it. Many Japanese soldiers were killed and wounded. Details are unobtainable.

PARIS.—The Journal says a telegram from Vladivostok has reached St. Petersburg stating that the port is now free from ice and that Japanese warships are off the harbor. Serious news, it is added, may be expected shortly. This dispatch causes much anxiety for the fate of the Russian squadron which destroyed a Japanese merchant steamer at Gensan yesterday. Gensan is 350 miles south of Vladivostok. If a Japanese squadron is already off Vladivostok it must have arrived there after the Russian ships left. This would indicate the Russian fleet has been cut off from its base and that if overtaken by the Japanese must give battle on the open sea.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 26, 1916.

LONDON.—Dublin, the capital of Ireland, is a smoldering volcano as a result of twenty-four hours of the most furious street fighting which followed a sudden but carefully prepared uprising of the Sinn Feiners. The rebels are besieged by royal troops, according to a late report, and much blood has already been shed. One of the reports says riots are still in full swing. The city is cut off from telegraphic communication. All signs indicate that England is face to face with the long threatened revolution by the bitter element of the Irish population, which for years has been yearning to "free Ireland." One rumor reaching here is that the rebels captured Lord Wimborne. The lord lieutenant and his secretary are said to be held as hostages for Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested last week as a result of an attempt by a German auxiliary to land arms in Ireland. Casement is now in London awaiting trial. It is predicted he probably will escape execution, as officials are convinced he has been mentally unbalanced for three years.

WASHINGTON.—Congress is being swamped with the most remarkable protest made against any policy of any President of the United States. More than 100,000 telegrams, signed for the greater part by American citizens of German birth or parentage, were delivered to congressmen today, each message urging that congress do all in its power to prevent the President from pushing the country into war with Germany. The Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies have every line in Washington busy receiving messages. Reports from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and other large cities indicate that more than 250,000 messages of protest are waiting at the telegraph offices in these cities for transmittal to Washington.

GOVERNMENT SALARIES.

Chicago, April 18.—At the present time there is a strong sentiment in congress in favor of slashing federal salaries. Comments in favor of wage cuts are not based upon wise consideration of all the factors. Knowing THE TRIBUNE is always willing and anxious to present both sides of every question, it is my desire to give a few facts in favor of the employés.

A majority of citizens throughout the United States have the opinion federal employés are supported in luxury by the taxpayers' money in exorbitant salaries.

Statistics recently gathered show that only 17 per cent of the expenses of the federal government is paid as salaries to its civilian employés.

The most startling revelation made by the compilation is that 17 per cent of 732,460 employés are in a salary class under $1,000, 59 per cent from $1,000 to $2,199, 17 per cent from $2,200 to $2,699, 6 per cent from $2,700 to $4,999, and three-fifths per cent over $5,000.

The figures show clearly that the United States is not extravagant in remunerating its faithful employés.

From these indisputable facts the only reason that can be advanced for cutting federal salaries is to punish the workers.

Another fact is that federal employés contribute 2½ per cent of their monthly salaries to their own pension fund and are not retired on a pension given solely by the government. E. R. WILLIAMS.

BUT WE FAVOR TONNAGE CHARGES.

Chicago, April 14.—Speaking of government paternalism, which seems to be a sore spot with THE TRIBUNE—especially if the farmer is on the receiving end—I read in this morning's TRIBUNE that its paper fleet is racing to Chicago via the great lakes, carrying a cargo of 14,706,000 pounds of paper.

Let's see how much paternalism THE TRIBUNE accepts from Uncle Sam with this shipment:

The government buys and maintains boats to lay buoys designating the channel, and hires and pays crews to man these boats. The government builds lighthouses and maintains them, hires keepers to run them as well as inspectors to inspect them. The government maintains observatories, builds radio stations, and employs help to forecast weather conditions. The government maintains a coast guard to rush to the aid of vessels in distress—these and innumerable other services are rendered by the government gratis. But perhaps this is not paternalism when THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is one of the beneficiaries.

LITTER IN THE FOREST PRESERVES.

Chicago, April 19.—Your issue of April 16 carried a letter from Mr. James Tilton Smith with reference to refuse in the branch of the Chicago river at the end of the Milwaukee avenue car line, in the forest preserve district. An immediate inspection of the area disclosed that the river where it lies in the forest preserve district is free of trash. The entire course of the Chicago river from this point to Morton Grove where it lies in the forest preserve district was cleaned last fall.

The forest preserve district contains eighty miles of stream course, all of it a constant source of tin cans, rubbish, automobile bodies, and the like. A number of men were used from welfare forces in the last year in an effort to get it clean and keep it clean. I believe the criticism of Mr. Smith is entirely unwarranted. CHARLES G. SAUERS,
General Superintendent, Forest Preserve District of Cook county.

JOBS PREFERRED.

Chicago, April 21.—I believe that I am expressing the opinion of thousands of ex-service men when I say that we would gladly wait another 20 years for that bonus providing you who are opposing it would provide each and every vet out of employment with a job. [Not selling apples.] SAM MARKOWITZ.

FROM A FARMER'S WIFE.

Champaign, Ill., April 13.—I am a corn belt farmer's wife, one of the many heartbroken, discouraged, and downhearted. We live in a beautiful, fertile section of the great middle west, but for several years farming has been a nightmare, and now after years of this tragedy farm prices are lower than ever. How can we pay our interest and taxes on 23 cent corn and 40 cent wheat?

Last September a mortgage came due on our farm and we were able through straining every nerve, doing without every comfort, and borrowing a little to meet interest and taxes, but had nothing to pay on the principal. We assumed this mortgage when times were good, and had hoped to pay it off easily as we had other debts in years gone by.

The mortgage is held by a great eastern life insurance company with offices in a nearby city and they very generously offered to extend the mortgage for one more year, raising interest from 5 to 6 per cent. What could we do? We must keep the home we have loved and toiled for. We are getting old, so we grasped at a straw. Of course times would be better by then, so we signed up.

Here we are, worse prices than ever! What can we do? Will they take our home? Farms are being foreclosed around here every few days, taking everything in the world some people have.

If the loan companies would wait we would pay all just as soon as prices allow. Can't the government help the farmer? If we fail, everything fails. Can't the President help in this great emergency? MRS. G. L. M.

WHY NOT!

Chicago, April 20.—Now that a lot of the big shots in business are busted and those that are left are trying hard to get by, a few words of advice to Uncle Sam from a sucker who has to date kept his business going in spite of no help from any commerce committees or Washington relief might not be amiss.

Take quick steps to repeal the Volstead prohibition act at once and legally give Uncle Sam a large revenue from the 200,000,000 or more gallons of hard liquor consumed in the U. S. A. [evidence from U. S. senate subcommittee on the Bingham beer bill], to say nothing of the bootleg beer that is also being consumed daily. The only thing prohibition prohibits is a revenue tax for Uncle Sam.

I have been watching general business conditions for over ten years, and from personal and careful attention to changing conditions, such as unrest, gangs, crooked politicians, which means vicious police, large sums of money in the hands of hoodlums used to fix any and all kinds of devilitry, all started by the Volstead prohibition act. I make the statement that the U. S. A. will never see a return to even a fair amount of prosperity until the Volstead prohibition act is repealed and a sensible, intelligent temperance act is put in its place, together with an educational campaign to promote temperance.

My experience has been that 4 per cent beer is a temperate drink and would do away with the consumption of a great deal of the hard liquor that is now being consumed. Four per cent beer legally made and heavily taxed would balance the federal budget, put thousands to work, help the farmer and bring back prosperity. Why not try it?

CHAOS.

A REPUBLICAN VOTE.

Chicago, April 13.—While the writer has always been a Republican, he will certainly change at election time and will urge all of his friends to vote for Judge Horner. It is to be hoped that there are enough people downstate who can read and write and formulate opinions to the point where they will not be carried away by the prattle about King George, organized wealth, subsidized press, and such other ballyhoo.

250,000 FACE ARREST FOR ALL NIGHT PARKING

Police Seek to Relieve "Traffic Jam."

BY HAL FOUST.

Police Commissioner Allman yesterday ordered the printing of arrest tickets to tag the 250,000 automobiles that are parked on Chicago's streets all night. He said his announced campaign to ban parking between the hours of 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. will begin in a few weeks.

COMMISSIONER ALLMAN.

"This is to relieve the depression for the garages?" an interviewer asked. "Will it do anything to help automobile owners ride through the depression?"

"Don't joke about the problem," the commissioner replied. "It's a serious situation. The council passed an ordinance last July prohibiting all night parking, and it's the duty of the police department to enforce the ordinances."

To Relieve "Traffic Jam."

"Did the garage men pass the ordinance?"

"No. Seriously, the ordinance is to relieve the traffic congestion caused by parking."

"Is there much of a traffic jam between 2 and 6 a. m., the hours of the ban?"

"No, but if a fellow can't let his car stand outside all night he'll put it in a garage when he comes home from work or home from the movies. He won't get out of bed at 2 a. m. to put it in a garage," said the commissioner, ending that line of conversation. "Also, we must do something to reduce the number of automobile thefts."

Still Plenty of Autos.

"After you fill up all the garages, won't there still be 100,000 or 150,000 automobiles in the city without shelter, enough for all the thieves to get as many cars as they can use?"

"Well, they won't have so many cars to select from, anyway," said the police commissioner. "If any one wants to repeal the ordinance, it's none of my business. My business is to prohibit parking between 2 and 6 a. m. as long as that is the ordinance. Sure, I know there are a lot of automobile owners without the price of a garage; they'll probably have to find vacant lots."

At the office of the Chicago Public Garage Operators' association Harry Salvat, secretary and treasurer, was interviewed.

"No," he replied to a question, "this association hasn't been active in supporting the all night parking ordinance. We wouldn't use the police department to get us more business. The police might drive the automobiles into the garages, but they couldn't make car owners without money pay the garage bills."

About Cockeyed Mulligan.

"Is Dave [Cockeyed Mulligan] Ablin connected with your association?"

"He's not an officer nor a director," replied Mr. Salvat. "He hasn't anything to do with the management of this association. This association has twenty-eight of the biggest garage owners of the city as its directors. We're a law abiding organization and have done a lot to stop men from sticking ice picks in tires of cars parked on the streets all night."

"Does Dave Ablin work for you in any way?"

"He's just an organizer, employed to get more members," said the secretary.

Cockeyed Mulligan, as he is known to hoodlums, has been in the news for several years as the alleged proprietor of several oft raided night clubs. A year ago the racket bureau of the state's attorney's office investigated reports he was organizing "the Cook County Garage Owners' association."

Five clerks of the Traffic court yesterday began the preparation of 850 orders for the arrest of motorists who neglected to appear before Municipal Judge George B. Holmes to explain why they failed to have 1932 license plates on their cars. Those who did appear, 716, assured the judge they had ordered the plates and were dismissed without court costs being assessed against them.

Connolly and Crowe's Kin Will Go on Trial Tomorrow

Timothy L. Connolly, former purchasing agent of the sanitary district, and Donald R. Joyce, son-in-law of Tim Crowe, and former superintendent of vehicle maintenance, are scheduled to go on trial tomorrow before Judge John Prystalski on charges of forgery during the sanitary district "whoopee era." Prosecutor John E. Northup, who won convictions in the cases against Timothy Crowe and other former trustees and officials announced yesterday that the state was ready for trial when Connolly and Joyce were arraigned before Chief Justice Harry H. Fisher. The case was assigned to Judge Prystalski.

MAYOR CERMAK TO HELP SELECT BLOSSOM QUEEN

Announced as Judge at Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago will serve as a judge here Wednesday night to select the blossom queen in southwestern Michigan's tenth annual blossom festival. The festival is to be held from May 1 to May 8.

Announcement that the Chicago mayor would assist in picking the queen was made tonight by Elwyn Simons, manager of the Liberty theater, where the final contest will be held.

Other judges will include Kathleen Corey of Chicago, Marion Taylor of Detroit, Ivan Williamson, University of Michigan, and Paul Host of Notre Dame university.

Twenty-six girls, representing their respective home towns, will vie for the title of blossom queen. Eighteen of the aspirants are brunettes. The others are blonds. The winner will succeed Jane Filstrup of Benton Harbor, last year's queen.

The twenty-six "queens," arriving here Wednesday, each in her own town car, furnished by the various communities, will form an autocade, parading the blossom belt.

REALTY DEALER'S SUICIDE IS LAID TO FINANCIAL WORRY

A verdict of suicide as a result of financial worries was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury investigating the death of Robert White, loop real estate dealer whose offices were at 160 North La Salle street. His body was found yesterday morning in his apartment at 40 East Oak street. He had shot himself through the head. A revolver was found near his body.

Mr. White, who was 55 years old, had been in business here 30 years, a member of the Chicago Real Estate Board since 1911 and chairman of its valuation committee. He was separated from his wife, Mrs. Emma Merigold White, who lives in the Webster hotel with two sons, Edwin, 22 years old, and Sheldon, 18. A third son, Robert Jr., 25 years old, who was associated with his father in business and who lives at 25 East Walton street, discovered the body when he called to take his father to their offices.

"He was disgusted with the depression," Robert Jr. said at the inquest. "Sometimes he would say 'what's the use?' He had business worries, but the business is sound."

MAJOR JOHN S. COHEN, GEORGIA PUBLISHER, APPOINTED SENATOR

Atlanta, Ga., April 25.—[Special.]—Gov. Richard B. Russell Jr. today appointed Maj. John S. Cohen, editor of the Atlanta Journal, to serve as United States senator from Georgia until next November. Maj. Cohen will fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator William J. Harris.

The Harris term does not expire until 1937 and Gov. Russell will be a candidate for the place in the general election in the fall.

Maj. Cohen, who has been Democratic national committeeman from Georgia since 1924, is a member of a distinguished southern family.

The new senator joined the staff of the Journal in 1890 and was reporter, special Washington correspondent, and editorial writer. He was a correspondent and later an army officer in the Spanish-American war. His father was a Confederate officer.

Since 1917 Maj. Cohen has been president and editor of the Journal. He is no stranger to political Washington, having been for a time secretary to Hoke Smith, who was secretary of the interior under President Cleveland.

Many Americans Cancel Eucharistic Congress Trip

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, April 25.—It was stated authoritatively today that many cancellations from expected visitors to the Eucharistic congress have been received, the reason being financial stringency and fears of the Irish political situation. Many bookings have failed to materialize, including about 20,000 from England and America.

BOB GAST, PILOT ON TRIBUNE TRIP, IS SERIOUSLY ILL

Miami, Fla., April 25.—[Special.]—Bob Gast, former pilot for John Hertz and pilot of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S "Untin' Bowler" which was lost at Port Burwell, Labrador, on a projected flight to Europe via Greenland, is seriously ill with stomach ulcers. He collapsed suddenly last night and was taken to a hospital.

Seven Miami aviators offered their blood when it was announced a blood transfusion would be necessary. Duke Schiller, pilot for Gar Wood, noted speedboat racer, gave a pint of blood. Gast is in a critical condition but is improved today and is being strengthened for a stomach operation which is necessary to save his life.

John Hertz wired from New York offering any assistance possible. Miami aviators, to relieve Mrs. Gast of any financial anxiety, told her that all expenses have been paid. Mrs. Gast is expecting a child very soon.

LOCUSTS SWEEP OVER AFRICA ON 500 MILE FRONT

CAPE TOWN, April 25.—(AP)—Countless billions of locusts, moving inexorably forward at the rate of 100 miles a day, are laying waste great sections of West Africa and parts of the Union of South Africa.

In some places, farmers living in the affected districts said, the insects seemed to be moving in a cloud 500 miles wide and three times that long.

Attempts were made to attack them from motor trucks, but they soon outdistanced the trucks. Airplanes also were used without effect, and the authorities declared all they could do was to wait until the locusts began to breed and then attack the swarms separately.

IRELAND TO REPAY DE VALERA'S '21 LOAN FROM U. S.

May Have to Borrow to Meet $4,000,000 Debt.

DUBLIN, April 25.—(AP)—The Fianna Fail government is taking steps to repay investors in the $5,875,000 Republican bond issue of 1921, held principally in the United States.

Records relating to the loan were deposited with American courts, but they have been returned to the Free State authorities, who now are investigating to ascertain whether it will be necessary to enact legislation to make repayment. It may be that the government will have to borrow to meet principal and interest on the loan.

The loan was raised by Eamon de Valera himself in the United States, in two sections. The first was issued in January, 1921, for $5,250,000 and the second in November of the same year for $625,000.

About $2,000,000 was tied up by the American courts in 1923 before it reached the Free State and later was returned to the investors.

Thus, there remains nearly $4,000,000, plus interest, still to be paid. The rate of interest has not been determined but probably will be 8 shillings to the pound, which is the rate on internal loans.

The Cosgrave government recognized the validity of the loan and it was included among the Free State obligations in 1924. The American court action, however, complicated repayment.

To shippers and users of dry commodities:

General American Tank Car Corporation announces A TANK CAR TO CARRY DRY-FLOWING SOLIDS!

AFTER years of research and thousands of miles of road tests, General American Tank Car Corporation now announces one of the most far-reaching freight transportation developments of the century . . . a railroad car to carry dry-flowing solids in bulk.

Advantages of bulk shipment are manifold. Shipping in bulk is more convenient, more economical, more efficient. These advantages, heretofore available only to the shipper of liquids, are now open to you.

The new Dry-Flo car will revolutionize the shipment of many commodities—cement, lime, silica sands, sulphur, fertilizers, cleaning compounds, soda ash, pottery clays, Fuller's Earth—these and many other granular materials can now, for the first time, be shipped as conveniently and efficiently as standard tank cars handle liquid commodities.

Old-fashioned shipping methods must give way to the Dry-Flo car. Packaging expenses are eliminated. Handling costs are reduced. The inefficiency of shovel and wheelbarrow methods is no longer necessary. Safety in handling, and freedom from dust are assured.

The practicability of the Dry-Flo car has already been demonstrated through numerous trial trips. It is loaded through openings at the top of the car, and the product is uniformly transported to a bottom outlet by simple conveying equipment. Because the Dry-Flo car now makes possible the bulk shipment of dry commodities heretofore shipped only in packages, it will make substantial savings for many industries. If you are either a shipper or user of a dry-flowing solid, undoubtedly your industry is one which needs the Dry-Flo car. We will be happy to discuss its various uses with you. Address General American Tank Car Corp., Continental Illinois Bank Building, Chicago, Ill.

FACTS about the DRY-FLOW car

Provided with conveying machinery within the car, which enables the use of but one outlet, and the simplest possible conveying machinery for carrying material from car to plant.

Water-tight and dust-proof. Divided into three compartments, the two end compartments carrying the lading and the small center compartment communicating with the dome, for the unloading machinery. Power furnished by an electric motor located within the dome or by means of external power which may be applied by a shaft provided.

The operation of the car is simplicity itself, it only being necessary to open a valve at the bottom of the car and connect up the motor by means of a flexible cable to a source of electric power.

More convenient, more economical, more efficient, and safer.

GENERAL AMERICAN, supplementing the car service of the railroads, for years has been a pioneer in modern freight transportation. The new Dry-Flo car should bring back to the railroads shipments of granular commodities which they have lost. Still more important, the convenience and economy of this new car will keep much business on the railroads at a profit both to carrier and shipper. Its invention marks but one more important step in the development of railroads . . . the most efficient means of transportation man has ever known.

THE WHISPERER

By ROY VICKERS

SYNOPSIS.

"The 'Whisperer' Crimes" have held London terrorized for months. Numerous wealthy persons have been kidnaped and held for ransom. The ransom victim is sent a small wireless receiving set, by means of which the "Whisperer" speaks, using his own short wave, and gives directions for delivering the ransom demanded. Police dare not interfere, because death results for the captive if directions are not carried out.

Joyce Merrow, engaged to Roland Blatch, secretary to Sir Henry Glazeborough, M. P., a leading philanthropist, is taken captive. In Roland's keeping are valuable jewels, donated to Sir Henry to be sold for charity. Roland is forced to steal them for the bandit to insure the safe return of his beloved. When Joyce is again safely home, Roland decides to accept an offer from the bandit to join his band and try to recover the jewels. He is sent to an address where a woman named Connie gives him a facial treatment which alters his appearance. Roland reports every day to Connie, where the Whisperer talks to him through a telephone loud speaker, but remains hidden from view. He is assigned the task of collecting ransom from Lord Whiddon, whose wife is held captive, and is involved in the killing of Lady Whiddon when her husband fails to meet the Whisperer's demands.

INSTALLMENT XIV.

THE BANDIT'S HIDEOUT.

There was a long account of his stealing the Squad car. They had worked out fairly accurately how he had done it—but they assumed he had hidden in the hedge, whereas he had actually crouched between the headlights of the car.

It was the car that really interested Roland and a great deal was made of it. It was, said the account, the most important capture so far made by the police, and likely to be of great assistance to them in their campaign.

There was a description of the opaque glass of the windows that looked like ordinary glass at a casual glance from the pavement. They had found the wireless transmitter of which a technical description was given.

"In addition to these the car was fitted with other unusual mechanical devices of which details are withheld by request of the police."

With that sentence vanished Roland's last faint hope. Elsewhere there was an allusion to the fact that Lady Whiddon had apparently died of poison gas. It was not specifically stated that the gas had been administered in the car, but to Roland the "other mechanical devices" could mean only this.

She gave one short staccato blast of the horn—there came the faint grinding of electric mechanism—and the big doors parted.

"I wonder what that car was worth!" He laughed, for in spite of everything, there was pleasure in the thought that the Whisperer had lost very heavily over yesterday's work.

"About two thousand, I expect," answered Connie. "But the Chief won't mind. He'll be frightfully pleased about your getting their car. You've done me a good turn, for it'll put him in a good temper."

That, he thought, made it quite clear that she was to see the Whisperer that morning. He was about to broach the subject of his coming with her when there came a knock on the outer door. He got up to answer it and she made no demur.

He went to the door by which they had come in overnight but there was no one there. Then he realized his mistake. At the other end of the hall was an ordinary glass paneled front door.

A couple of youngish men stood outside and greeted him with a grin.

"Well, Number Six! Pleased to meet you! My name's Dick, Number Four. I was in that lorry on the Great West Road last night. You didn't 'alf have a night out, by the look of it."

He turned and indicated his companion.

"This is Walter. Walter Who, says you. Never mind who—no names, no pack-drill."

"Pleased to meet you, boy!" said Walter, and Roland recognized the voice of the man who had spoken to him on the telephone in Bedford Row.

Dick was carrying a small package which he handed to Connie as they all went into the sitting-room.

For a couple of minutes the conversation was general, centering round his own exploits with the Flying Squad. He gave brief answers to their questions, thereby increasing his standing as a man uninclined to boast.

Presently Dick got up and shuffled to the door.

"I'll be leaving you and Walter to it, missus," he said to Connie.

"I'll come with you," said Roland, but Dick shook his head.

"Not in public you won't—not if the Chief gets to hear about it," he said good humoredly. "Give me a couple of minutes' start, boy."

Roland gave him a couple of minutes' start—which suited him better.

He shut the outer door of the flat noisily enough for Connie to hear it in the sitting-room. He waited a moment, inserted the latchkey she had given him, stepped into the hall and carefully shut the door.

He tiptoed across the hall. Connie was talking to Walter. What she was saying was no concern of his.

He reached the opposite door and passed through it, and down the staircase to the garage.

The rest of his plan depended entirely on the dickey of the coupé.

He opened it, climbed in and then tried to shut the lid. There was a gap of at least three inches that would be bound to catch the eye.

He got out again and examined the dickey. There was the usual leather seat wide enough to seat three persons with a bit of a squeeze. He took it out and put it in the darkest corner of the garage and covered it.

Then he climbed back into the dickey, curled himself up on the floor and succeeded in closing the lid.

At the end of ten minutes or so he was compelled to raise the lid to admit a little comparatively fresh air. He had to repeat this twice before he heard Connie's footsteps on the staircase.

He heard her open the outer door, then during a short delay he had to endure the suspense of wondering whether she had caught sight of the dickey seat in the corner. It was not until she had got in and started the engine that he knew the first part of his plan had succeeded.

As the car sped along the road the back-draft gave him enough air to breathe easily. But the cramp in his legs passed to an intense pain.

He could tell she was repeating her maneuvers of the previous night—running through side streets, then stopping to see if she were followed, then running on again.

There was, he supposed, some twenty minutes of this before the car came to a stop and Connie switched off the engine and got out. By the echo of her footsteps he knew that they had stopped in an enclosed space.

He gave her a minute, listening acutely for any other presence. Hearing none, he lifted the lid of the dickey. He was in another private garage—a much larger one this, containing two lorries, a small two-seater and a big saloon.

He got out and looked about him. Behind the coupé the big double doors were shut. That was odd. He had not heard Connie open them—or shut them. And he was quite certain he had not heard anyone else do so.

In the wall opposite the doors was a window. He went to it and looked out at a private garden in the last stages of neglect.

Near the window was a small door, which obviously gave on to the garden, and he suspected that Connie had gone through this as there seemed to be no other exit. To go through the door into the garden was a risk he was not yet prepared to take. Besides, it would be better to wait until Connie was out of the way.

The lorries, he reasoned must be those used for blocking pursuit on the road. He climbed into the nearer one and hid himself.

In something under half an hour the door from the garden opened and Connie came in. She went straight to the coupé and started up. Then the mystery of the doors was explained.

She gave one short staccato blast of the horn—there came the faint grinding of electric mechanism—and the big doors parted. The coupé drove through. The horn sounded again and the doors closed.

It was impressive but not at all mysterious. Some three or four years ago he had read of a rich man having his garage so fitted that the doors would open by wireless, actuated by the note of the horn, starting an ordinary electric motor. It would be necessary that all the horns used on the various cars of the Whisperer should be pitched on the same note.

He dropped lightly onto the garage door, his pulse stingle now with the single purpose of finding the Whisperer.

In broad daylight he could not hope to work out any scheme that depended on his concealment in the open.

He took the revolver from his pocket, slipped back the safety catch, then crept through the little door into the garden.

Above him, to the left, toward the house—a rambling, old family mansion of the early nineteenth century. Twenty feet away was a back door, giving on to the kitchen quarters.

With his finger on the trigger, he went to the door and opened it. He was in a short corridor leading to a scullery. There was no sound.

He passed through the scullery into the kitchen. Dust lay thick everywhere and it was obvious that the kitchen quarters were not used. The floor of the kitchen was of stone and ahead were bare boards. He stooped down and whipped off his shoes.

He crept into the hall in which there was a carpet and some heavy mid-Victorian furniture. Doors opened to right and left of the hall.

He stood outside the nearer door and listened—then turned the handle and stepped quickly inside, the revolver pointing ahead.

Now Is a Good Time to Begin That Reducing

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Because the great fashion need of the moment is a waist line minus adipose, may be you'd better get out the tape measure and check up on yours. You are going to wish awfully before summer that you had begun training yours early. Those belted dresses and belted blouses and tucked in blouses simply crave a waist line.

The short little jacket suit cries out loudly for one. These latter on a waistless figure square off a torso in a most unflattering way.

But above all else, above fashion cries and silhouette beauty, it's the feeling of muscular freedom and movement that comes with a fat free waist that matters. I don't know anything that makes a woman feel so stiff and oldish as a waistline so buried under flesh that she can't bend over or down without a feeling of discomfort.

This is a grand reducing time for a number of reasons. Spring itself calls for a renewal of youth. The system is probably clogged after the heavier winter fares. And a vegetable spree and fruit, the lighter meats, much water drinking, and the eliminative needs tended properly will do all that is necessary to put the spring song into the lovely season for you.

For this neater waistline begin with the good old stomach shrinking trick. Subsist on liquid juices for three days only. You may make it fruit juice, or a soup stock, or tomato juice, or milk, or buttermilk. Any way, try [without cheating] to get a great deal of liquid into your system for three days. It's the recommended way for the body to do its spring cleaning.

If you've been a constipation victim, take enemas daily, or take a mineral oil. Anyway, get yourself thoroughly cleaned out. Three days is enough for this, and if your waistline doesn't feel freer at the end of three days I'll be surprised and you should be. Then, without fuss, feathers or talk [much talk isn't good for reducing morale] lighten your breakfast to one piece of toast with coffee.

Make your lunch consist of a huge bowl of vegetable or fruit salad and not more than one roll. Your dinner should consist of chicken or lamb chop or some such light meat, two vegetables and a salad. This will see you through quite comfortably. You can hew to this course for two weeks or longer, if need be. But if you are sticking to it longer, add a baked potato [small] twice a week, for it is not wise to eliminate starches completely from the diet. Then, do some one good bending-from-the-waist exercise, but do it thirty to fifty times morning and night.

Columbines Do Well in Shady Spots in Yard

BY PAUL POTTER.

Since we can't all go to the mountains or hillsides where columbines flourish in their own inspiring native habitat, we'll have to bring the mountain to Mahomet and some of the seed or nursery plants of this glorious flower along with it into our yards.

It is sometimes difficult to obtain the pure strain of the numerous columbine varieties, since natural crossing is so evident in cultivating this flower. But for most practical purposes the hybrids are even more delightful as well as suitable to the home garden.

Fortunately, the columbine comes easily from seed in most localities, and a section of the mature root will yield a rapidly spreading source of columbines. A light sandy loam is to be preferred, and when once started they fend and spread of themselves, making the columbine an almost carefree bloom.

In the borders and especially under the light shade of trees, the long-spur hybrids of columbine will be found to flourish where many other flowers lag behind. Longer life and better bloom is to be noted in placing the columbines in a sandy nook near the house or garage, or in a nook of shrubs, much as nature would provide.

Marx Brothers' Jokes Worry to Surgeons

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., April 25.—It's got so uproarious in the wing of the hospital where Chico Marx is nursing a fractured knee cap, and where all the other three Marx brothers daily file in to cheer Chico and play pranks, that some of the more solemn surgeons are hinting that possibly Chico ought to move somewhere else. They fear that if the brothers keep on enlivening the hospital with jokes, some of the recently operated upon patients may break their stitches laughing.

George Bancroft has been relieved of one worry since Universal signed Charlie Bickford to a long term contract. For a considerable time Paramount, where Bancroft has been the main "He-Man" star, was talking terms with Bickford's business agents to install red headed Charlie as No 1 bully boy in Bancroft's place. Paul Lukas, who used to be on contract to Paramount as portrayer of suave villains and foreign heroes, is also now tied up with a long term Universal contract.

Dora Pinter, who has been Constance Bennett's personal maid for eight years and made her up for her screen and public appearances daily, got her first chance to make up her own self and face the camera in a bit in Miss Bennett's "Truth About Hollywood" picture. This is the story in which a number of Hollywood notables play themselves for the screen.

Radio Pictures is continuing the team of Eric Linden and Arlene Judge in a new story, "Fraternity House," which will be this young couple's third collaboration in a story about young America. The story is adapted from Marti Flavin's play, "Crossroads." Sylvia Sydney played in it on the stage.

It's all settled for Jean Harlow to play the much mentioned name part in Metro's "Red Headed Woman," except what kind of a red wig Jean will wear. That girl certainly sticks to her platinum hair.

Child Dreams When School Work Is Bore

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Question: "My little girl's teacher says that she can't make her hurry—that if she had three days to do something in it would take just that long. She says M—— goes off into dreams and has to be brought back to her task often."

Answer: One of several things, or all of them, may account for this. The school work may be too easy—so easy that your little girl is bored or has loose time, and in that time she dreams. Or the school work may be too difficult. Also, the teacher may not make the work interesting enough to hold her attention.

Children often dawdle at this age, 7½, or drop off into their own interesting world of thoughts. Be gentle, avoid nagging, try to find some incentives for attentiveness. Visit the school room first. Then have a talk with the teacher. And, last, decide whether you think her home and play life are rich and interesting.

Question: "Are the books you mentioned some time ago of Jules Verne like 'Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea' too old for a 7 year old? I run a bookshop at night when my children are in bed, and I don't want to go wrong."

Answer: Yes, Jules Verne's books are decidedly too old. They are often replete with scientific description as well as adventure. Perhaps our list of books for children to read graded to age would help you; also our two lists of books for young nature lovers.

Question: "Some time ago you wrote an article on telling foster children the truth about their being adopted. Have you a booklet on the subject?"

Answer: This question comes in frequently and I am sorry to have to say no to it. I have written many articles on the subject, but they can only be found in the newspaper files.

TRAVELING MAN ENDORSES ALL-BRAN

Says It Brought Relief from Constipation

"I want to take this unsolicited means to tell you what ALL BRAN has done for me.

"I am on the road all the time, and this has a tendency to constipate me, or any one who travels all the time. I used to suffer a great deal from constipation, until some one told me about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since I have been eating this cereal, I have been cured of constipation. I heartily endorse it to any one suffering as I did."—Mr. B. F. Pollard, Marion, N. C.

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. Laboratory tests show ALL-BRAN provides both. At the same time, it supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Being a natural corrective ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming.

How much better than risking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation—serious cases, with every meal. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Good morning!

When the roll of the "Best Pictures of 1932" is called up in the "yonder" of 1933, I suspect that the title "Grand Hotel" will head the list.

Great picture, from great play, from great book! On Sunday night it held a capacity audience thrilled for two solid hours. Two hours—think it over.

Never before has such a cast been assembled for one production. No picture has ever been accorded more brilliant, sympathetic, and far seeing direction. Director Goulding has done as he said he would do—made his camera "as much like a person as possible." Said he:

"It will walk, as a person does, through the door of the Grand Hotel. It will have eyes and ears and will observe, follow, and saunter (as if of its own accord) within the story. . . . The hotel itself will play a distinct part in the picture. It will be more than merely a locale, a setting. It will be a distinct personality. . . ." And again:

". . . There will be no extra players as such. Every person who appears before the camera will be a distinct and important character. . . ."

Fears that Mr. Goulding might lose his sense of proportions and make his "grand" hotel too impossibly, Demillically so, have proved groundless. Beauty, statelliness, luxury he has captured, and presents by some of the most remarkable photography! but never does he exceed the bounds of good taste and credibility. How pitifully tawdry and incomplete the stage settings were, how impressionistic and jerky its flittings from person to person and room to room as compared with the film's rich backgrounds and smooth action!

Is the picture greater than the play? Yes, I think so. There are several slight deviations from the original narrative, but these I thought were for the better.

It can't be said that anybody gives a "best" performance. A beautiful mosaic, "Grand Hotel"—with every inset perfect, and each small individual story design exquisitely complementing the unusual and fascinating pattern which is the whole.

Never was Greta Garbo more artistic and appealing than as the Russian dancer who finds such brief, tempestuous happiness in the arms of the gay, ne'er do well Baron who, with her, is to know real love for the first time in his curious, checkered career—and be snuffed out before the yearning dreams of either himself or Grusinskaya can even begin to come true.

John Barrymore as the Baron gives one of the finest and most sincere characterizations of his career—and you love him.

Joan Crawford invests the rôle of Flaemmchen, the blithe little stenographer who takes fate as it comes with smile, stoicism, and uplifted chin, with enthusiasm and pathos. In the seclusion of her closet she's been going to school to Greta Garbo. Burns Mantle spoke of likeness in technique. He's right. It's there—and it's new.

Wallace Beery is perfect as the blustering Preysing, who meets with disaster you are glad to see overtake him because of his meanness to poor Kringelein—his one time bookkepeer who comes to the Grand Hotel for a first and last fling at life, before he dies, as he knows that he soon must do.

Kringelein—Lionel Barrymore! Did I say there was no "best" performance? Maybe not—but never will you forget Lionel Barrymore as Kringelein. . . . !

What a cast! What a cast! Flawless!

There's no use of raving further. "Grand Hotel" is one of the grandest movies ever made. Vicki Baum should be mighty proud and mighty happy.

We'll let it go at that.

First Nighters at Breadline Frolics

Opening Night of "Frolics" Is Just Like Opera

"It's just like the opera, ain't it?" asked one of the policemen on duty at the Majestic theater last night. And he was right. It was just like the opening night of the opera from the point of view of the audience, for every one whose name makes social news on the morning after the first night of opera each season was there. Not in his or her opera clothes, however, for street clothes were in order and there were only a few men and women in formal evening attire.

But it was a gala audience, just the same, and an enthusiastic one, and judging by the success with which the opening performance of "The Breadline Frolics" was acclaimed it would seem as if the production might have as long a run as its backers are hoping for. After last night the tickets will be from 25 cents to $1 and Mrs. Waller Borden and her committee hope that every employed man in the city and his wife and children will see the show before it closes.

Mrs. Borden stated last night that the proceeds of the opening performance would amount to more than $4,000. The sponsoring committee is bearing the incidental expenses connected with the production and Otto W. Lehmann is donating the theater, so every penny taken in goes to the unemployed men from the free shelters. Last night's proceeds were increased by the amount it would cost for one woman to take a trip to New York, for during the first intermission this generous woman told Mrs. Borden she had intended going to New York today, but that she had decided to stay at home and to give the money to "The Breadline Frolics," instead.

A bevy of pretty Junior leaguers were selling programs and carnations in the lobby before the performance and it would have taken a hard heart and a tight fist to have gotten past these "gimme" girls without putting some silver in their boxes. Mrs. Robert S. Pirie (Betty Borden), Mrs. James W. Rogers (Jane Linn), Miss Ruth Elting, Miss Florence Otis, Miss Betty Offield, Miss Pauline Perry, Miss Louise Neff, Miss Janet Ayer, Miss Margot Atkin, and her sister, Adelaide, Miss Louise Brewer, Miss Caroline McNair, Mis Dorothy Dewes, Miss Lucie Jacobs, and Miss Florence Carr were among them.

Mrs. Borden's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Traylor, Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins, Radcliffe Browne, and Mr. and Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson [Ellen Borden], and Henry H. Porter. With Mrs. Freeman Hinckley, co-chairman with Mrs. Borden of the committee, were Mr. Hinckley, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf and Mr. and Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin.

The Vicomtesse Violette de Sibour and her father, Harry Gordon Selfridge, were kept busy during the intermission greeting old friends, the pretty litte comtesse looking very smart in a black chiffon gown and a black coat, fur trimmed. They were in a party that included Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer, Mrs. Horace Gray, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour and Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Forgan were together, both young women looking extremely lovely.

Among others were Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Hinde, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hopkins, Mrs. William P. Hodgkins and her son, Press Hodgkins, and his wife, the former Louise Carr, and her father, Robert F. Carr; Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Rickcords, Mr. and Mrs. Valentine C. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beacom, Mr. and Mrs. T. Philip Swift and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift; Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick [she was the efficient box chairman for last night], Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Mulford, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Graham.

Several of society's engaged couples were there, including Barbara Neff and Solomon B. Smith, who are to be married on May 14; Ann Elizabeth Walsh and Johnson Couch, Sophia Harrington and Jacob Bischoff, Rue Winterbotham and Alfred P. Shaw, who are rumored to be engaged but whose announcements have not been made.

Also there were Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick and her guests, Edwin Krenn, Miss Florence Noyes, Augustus S. Peabody, and Mr. and Mrs. John V. Farwell III.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Noble B. Judah, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Brown, and Miss Betty Brown, Miss Dorothy Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamill, Miss Eleanor Holden, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Blair, Miss Peggy Hambleton, Miss Isabel Gordon, Frank McNair, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Curtis, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Townsend McKeever, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Belden.

Wants Court to Protect Exhibition of "Scarface"

Hollywood, Cal., April 25.—(AP)—Preliminary skirmishes between Howard Hughes, film producer, and the film censor boards of the country over his gangster picture, "Scarface," approached the likelihood of a court engagement today. The film has been turned down in New York, Chicago and other cities in its original version the producer learned today, and his retaliation was a threat of a court fight to settle the power of the boards.

Minstrel Show by Jobless Hit on Own Merits

"Breadline Frolics" Scores Before Big House.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

"The Breadline Frolics," an entertainment staged by and for the jobless, homeless men in Chicago's unemployment shelters, brought a capacity audience into the obsolete Majestic theater last night, and renewed the oldest tradition of the American stage—the black face minstrel show. It was a sentimental occasion, but the performance did not need the blessing of charitable emotions. On its own merits as a brisk, melodious and merry affair, this "Frolics" proved to be a hit.

Here, in the hallowed ceremonial of Dockstader and Primrose, was the full course of sprouts of minstrelsy—the concert, with its dignified interlocutor and its clowning end men; its "olio," and its afterpiece. The "boys" from the shelter houses knew every wrinkle of the old school stuff, as well as the tricks of cabaret modernism, and they gave a show that won salvos of applause. This "Frolics" may be amateur of spirit, but it is professional of accomplishment.

A census of the performers would probably reveal the fact that many of them have experience as "troupers." The others have been trained in the weekly entertainments with which the shelter house groups have kept themselves amused during the winter of economic discontent. There wasn't a quavering, frightened amateur voice, or an uncertain amateur memory on the copious and diverting program.

The first part of a minstrel show must be supported by its end men, always ready with a joke or a ballad, and "The Breadline Frolics" has an able pair. Hal Reid, who looks like a veteran of the old professional "Ethioperas," put over a singing hit when called upon for "The Devil Song" [words and music by the company]. Then Michael Overling, on the other flank, came to bat to use a voice that has served its time in opera companies. He went after the laurels of Dennis King in "The Song of the Vagabonds" and "Mandalay," with much success.

Jodie Mason, a stalwart young Negro, was another high light of the bill in a plaintive, philosophic number called "Travelin'," which expressed the spirit of the evening. "We may be having hard luck, but we're game," was the theme of the rhymes that Jodie trolled out in a rich bass baritone.

Another colored boy, Al Williams, did what a brilliant exhibition of syncopated dancing always does with an American audience—he "stopped the show." That is to say, he could have held the stage for fifteen minutes of his swift and complex stepping if he hadn't been too modest to take more than one encore.

The minstrel first part came to its finale with the classic jubilee, "Happy Days Are Here Again." Only they sang it, slightly altered, as "Happy days will come again," and they seemed to have full faith in the prophecy.

In the olio there were jugglers, and Hawaiian musicians, and contortionists, and other vaudeville specialists, all decidedly competent. The afterpiece was a one act play, dealing with the vital matter of jobs and the lack of them, called "The Whistle Blows."

The subject of unemployment is not borne down upon with weight in this rollicking show. It is alluded to, now and then, with humorous intent. One of the end men yearns for a nice easy job, such as "dressing Mahatma Gandhi." The other mentions the tools of his present trade—a knife and fork, plied at a shelter house table.

The performance will be repeated at the Majestic tonight and tomorrow night. The engagement may be prolonged if there is activity at the box office. Negotiations are in progress for a tour of the company to other cities. The receipts of last night's show were about $4,000.

Paramount Seeks Legal Discipline for Von Sternberg

Hollywood, Cal., April 25.—[Special.]—The Paramount motion picture studio today announced papers were being drawn for civil action against Joe Von Sternberg, film director. The studio also announced the same action would be taken against Marlene Dietrich, German film star who is Von Sternberg's protégé, if Miss Dietrich, like Von Sternberg, persists in refusing to work in a film to which they were assigned.

Von Sternberg signalized his and Miss Dietrich's "strike" by taking a train for New York last Saturday. He is under suspension on the studio's pay roll. B. P. Schulberg, production head of the studio, today said: "Mr. Von Sternberg has been quoted as saying it is a question of whether a director must make a picture of a story he doesn't like. We therefore have had the test forced upon us to determine whether employés drawing large sums weekly are, in fact, employés, or can do as they please. We believe that in these trying times in the motion picture industry and in the whole world's economic structure we should find out."

Jewish Big Sisters Will Seek Mile of Pennies for Needy

If enough pennies were laid edge to edge to reach a mile they would total $844.80—or the amount of the "Mile of Pennies Fund" being raised by the Jewish Big Sisters for their work in supplying lunches, carfare and clothing to needy schoolgirls of Chicago.

The effort to raise this sum, announced at the meeting of the organization last night in the Hotel La Salle, is being directed by Miss Edith Eisman, chairman of the fund.

Contributions are received a "foot at a time," Mrs. J. M. Weiss, president of the club, explained, a foot requiring sixteen pennies.

Meeting Boosts Exhibit for 1933 Fair.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The American Negro spiritual is the direct descendant of African folk music, according to Prince Modupe Paris, himself a native African, who spoke, sang and conducted at Fullerton hall last night in the interest of the African exhibit at the coming Century of Progress exposition. With him were a group of ten American Negroes to sing spirituals, and, under his training and with the help of turbans on the costuming side, a number of African songs.

Music is an ingrained part of the Negro nature, he explained. In Africa song is a part of his work, of his play, of his religion. The Negro brought it to America with him, and though the rhythm of a new speech changed the rhythm of the song, though the melody itself changed as well, there is a resemblance that only the Negro musician could supply.

Last night's African music supplied evidence for a plausible theory. A boat song, followed by a street song, were melodies so simple as to classify as primitive in structure, but curiously attractive in their constantly repeated phrases. The first part of the program was of spirituals. Prince Modupe conducted, but he was not insistent about it. He was entirely willing to step into the line, let a soloist take up the tune and join with the others in clapping time and swaying to the pulse of the music. The result was not in the least a conventionalized concert performance of spirituals but something that seemed entirely spontaneous. A further result was one of the most charming performances of spirituals these ears have ever heard. The conductor himself is a baritone of marked ability. One of his solos, "Were You There?" was a bit of high art.

Renée Nizan, 18 years old, demonstrated that she is a remarkably capable organist at Kimball hall last night. A Parisian, she has been touring this country and Canada, and she made her Chicago debut at the call of three associations of organists.

It was a pleasure to hear such dexterous, clean cut technic as she exhibited, not to speak of her extraordinary interesting sense of the tone color of the instrument. Bach Toccata and Fugue in D minor was a high example of how Bach should be played; a transcription of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Bumble Bee" was a bit of virtuosity that had to be repeated; there was great charm in pieces by Couperin and Daquin of the old school, and Vierne and Gigout of more modern times. Another recital by her would seem to be highly advisable.

Girl in Small Town Hears Call of City; Hopes for Glamour, Career

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"He says with my looks I ought to be able to get a position on the stage and make a career for myself."

He is a traveling salesman who sells to the proprietor of the store in which the girl is working, and the store is miles from the big city, where careers are supposed to be waiting for the plucking. There is a farmer boy in the girl's life, a graduate of the state agricultural school. He is madly in love with Beth. And she loves him, or had no doubt of her love for him until the salesman came along with his story about the gold at the stage end of the rainbow.

Well, careers are made in big cities. No doubt about that. And careers are made on the stage. And beauty makes the door opening to opportunity swing easier than trying to crash in without looks. But big cities are cluttered with career aspirants and with girls with looks that would seem to an observer to be passport enough for quick and easy recognition. However, for the one girl who makes good in the big city there are hundreds, thousands who come no rearer to their dreams than a mediocre job in a business office and the very mischief of a time trying to make ends meet.

The traveling salesman whispering discontent into the small town girl's head used to be a popular drama villain. It's logical, however, to suppose that the traveling man today sees a pretty girl in a restricted environment whom he honestly does think might arrange a bigger career for herself in the big town. But the point is that his interest subsides with the girl's departure from her home town.

He cannot promote the career. He feels no responsibility and the girl is suddenly on her own without financial or moral support. And it is a slow, hard grind to attain success on the stage without unusual talent or without pull, these days.

If it means gambling with a real love, my advice is unqualifiedly—DON'T! No matter what success a girl might attain she still wants from life that one and only thing that matters—love.

Toscanini in New York; Says Health Is Perfect

New York, April 25.—(AP)—Arturo Toscanini, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony society, arrived today on the liner Ile de France to conduct a concert Thursday evening at Carnegie hall for the benefit of unemployed musicians. He plans to return to Europe on the same ship, sailing Saturday. "I come to help the unemployed musicians," Toscanini said, "and to offer them my sympathy and coöperation." The maestro, who had been suffering from neuritis, ra'' that his health now is "perfect" after a long rest at the little village of Piazzi, near Sienna.

Head-Hunting Men Weave and Wash Their Own Skirts

New York, April 25.—(AP)—The men of the head hunting Jivaros at the head waters of the Amazon river in Brazil not only wear skirts but they weave and launder them themselves, Dr. Mathew W. Sterling reported today as he returned on the Grace liner Santa Rita.

Dr. Sterling is head of the bureau of American anthropology at Smithsonian institution, Washington. He spent four months among the Jivaros in company with eight other scientists who sailed last Sept. 22. The others are on their way home and will arrive next week.

The custom of reserving the spinning and weaving for the men is unique among primitive peoples, the scientist said. The skirts are made of cotton and so carefully woven that many months are sometimes required for the job. The men wear nothing else and they wash their skirts once daily.

Women, he said, wear skirts and blouses. One blouse is the price of a wife.

Dr. Sterling described the Jivaros as well built, only slightly over 5 feet 5 inches tall and adorned with long, black hair which in the case of the men is permanently waved. Both the men and the women paint their faces. When not spinning or weaving the men hunt animals with poison darts which they shoot from blow guns, or they raid neighboring tribes, using lances and muzzle loading rifles.

The women do all domestic and field work aside from spinning and weaving.

Elopement of Lucy A. Stone Is Announced

School Wedding Last Fall Is Disclosed.

BY JUDITH CASS.

We telephoned yesterday to find out where Lucy Stone was going, having heard that she was leaving the city today, and imagine our surprise when we were told that she was leaving with her husband for a honeymoon at French Lick Springs!

"Mr. and Mrs. John Sheppard Stone announce the marriage last November of their daughter, Lucy Antoinette, to Eliot Porter Goss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Goss of Waterbury, Conn.," is the formal announcement that Mrs. Stone gave us.

By dint of much questioning we discovered that young Mr. Goss—he was a classmate of Lucy's brother, Dana, who was graduated from Yale last June—had been a devoted swain for some time, but that the Stones had persuaded, or rather thought they had persuaded, the young people to wait until this spring to announce their engagement and until June to be married.

Mr. Goss and Miss Stone decided not to wait, however, and last fall when he was visiting her at Vassar college, they quietly slipped away and visited a clergyman. They kept it a secret until recently, when they told her parents, who announced it yesterday to their relatives and intimate friends. Upon their return from French Lick Mr. and Mrs. Goss will be with Mr. and Mrs. Stone at 1260 Astor street until they find an apartment or house of their own.

Mrs. Goss made her debut in November, 1930, when she was a sophomore at Vassar college. She is a fifth generation Chicagoan, being a granddaughter of Mrs. Charles D. Dana, who has lived here for more than seventy-five years. Mrs. Goss left college in February of this year because of illness, intending to return, but that plan is canceled now, of course. She is a member of the Junior league and of the Service club.

Frances Rawson Is Married.

Only the immediate families were present at the wedding yesterday of Mrs. Frances Coonley Rawson and Thomas I. Underwood, son of Mrs. Frederick W. Petersen of Ann Arbor, Mich. The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Roy Hamilton of Ann Arbor at 12 o'clock in the apartment at 1130 Lake Shore drive of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Stuart Coonley, and was followed by a wedding luncheon.

The bride wore for the ceremony a dress of heavy chartreuse satin and a corsage of lavender orchids. Her "going away" costume consisted of the same chartreuse dress, a black hat with chartreuse trimming, and a black coat with a silver fox collar.

After a month's honeymoon in France, Mr. and Mrs. Underwood will reside with the Coonleys until they select an apartment of their own.

Mrs. John J. Louis was reëlected president of the Evanston Junior league at the annual meeting recently. The other new officers are: First vice president, Mrs. Gordon Canning; second vice president, Miss Helen Jones; recording secretary, Mrs. Alfred Taylor; corresponding secretary, Miss Helen Sargent; treas-

A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE—

Present Week Shopping Time for Children

Show Smart Fashions for Youngsters.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

NOW that all the tempests and temperatures of frenzied spring shopping for adult wardrobes are over, we can relax and shop for smart, smaller, editions of our own frocks and coats for vacationing school children. You couldn't find a better time to get better acquainted with your offspring and at the same time receive a few jolts and shocks as to what they want, and what this younger set will, and will not, wear.

The herd instinct flourishes lustily among the ranks of schoolgoers . . . It's practically impossible to get any self-respecting small male to wear gayly striped socks when the rest of the gang go in for diamond check designs . . . and likewise it is utterly useless to try to dress either brother or sister in colors that are pleasantly differentiating, at least to the maternal eye . . . the urge to be just like the rest of their kind is provokingly unsquelchable and the wise mother bows before the inevitable.

All the Chicago shops are prepared for these enthusiastic but particular shoppers this week of jubilation and freedom from school . . . coats, frocks, sweaters, crisp cotton frocks and everything necessary to finish the season with. Bright young brothers and sisters still slip into brother and sister combinations in coats as well as a suit and dress . . . and sister acts are always good, all dressed alike.

But the new coats are what will cause plenty of chatter . . . navy blue woolen ones with matching berets . . . they are as dashingly scarfed as any of the French grown-up affairs . . . all kinds of decorative ideas such as ships and dogs and cats are appliqued on them for extra interest. Summer coats of blond corduroy are the swankiest things imaginable in the new creamy white shade . . . and these also are equipped with matching embroidered berets.

Fresh, gay dresses of printed lawns are especially colorful for little girls from 6 to 10 . . . shades of delectable yellow and lavender and rose pink and a most heavenly blue; . . . with them can be worn the newest millinery creation—the wide brimmed pique hats with cunning bits of embroidery. And ginghams are splashing around in every child's department in town . . . checks, dots, and in lovely soft pastel colors . . . even a very young man can have his romper trousers of gingham plaid with crisp dimity blouses and be quite correct and unfeminine.

Handkerchief linen and the heavier linens make some of the most beguiling young fashions to be found this spring . . . many frocks are combined with two colors and contrasted by a third. These linen dresses are usually very simple and nicely tailored without any frills . . . one sunshiny affair is of orange yellow with long panels of crisp white linen appliqued up and down the entire frock.

English prints in corn flower blue with tiny sprigs of old fashioned flowers in white are utterly adorable for the wee little lady who wears a bonnet style hat . . . for the newest ensembles of this kind consist of frock with high Kate Greenaway waistline and the matching wide brimmed bonnet.

Party frocks this year are irresistible, dotted swiss being the favored material with dots in the most appetizing tints of raspberry, buttercup yellow and lime green. Soft French voiles and silk and chiffons very simply made with the tiniest of hand stitchings are the sort of party frocks for very special occasions that come to every party-going youngster at least once a week during the dancing season.

Embroidered Gown of Crepe

This richly embroidered gown of seagreen crepe is worn by Irene Dunne, film player. Tones of yellow, red and dark green intermingle with a soft girdle of seagreen, clasped with an ornament of old gold and pearl.

Readers Asked to Come to Aid of Food Expert

Wants German Bratvorst, Corn Cake Recipes.

BY MARY MEADE.

Together with the answered letters we are going to list a few queries of our own, and those of you who can come to our rescue—well, you'll have us in your debt for keeps.

Several readers have requested a recipe for "good old fashioned German bratvorst." Have you one?

The second recipe in which we discover ourselves lacking is one for "corn cake, not corn bread." The reader describes it as being "much like a pound cake in consistency, and is made with butter, sugar, eggs, flour, and corn meal." She continues: "It was served to me by a charming little German woman some years ago, but I never asked for the recipe and have never found it in any cookbook. It is probably an old German recipe, so perhaps your German readers could help you if you do not have it."

Though these recipes seem particularly addressed to Teutonic friends, don't you dare hesitate to write if you have the blood of some other land coursing through your veins!

And now may I quote a letter from a man . . . yes, we have men asking for help, too . . . however, on this occasion he is helping us. His suggested recipe is excellent. He writes as follows:

"Just think of a man offering suggestions in cooking! [Editor's comment: We think men make grand cooks.] But as I think this one is new, I am running a chance. It's vegetable soup that compels the person consuming it to chew it.

". . . A year ago I was troubled with high blood pressure and the doctor put me on a vegetable diet, at first everything raw, with the skins on. Later, after removing the actual cause of my trouble, I added the soup to my diet. As I improved in health I kept adding things such as salt, curry powder, sage, and other seasonings, formerly forbidden. So now I am really enjoying two big dishes of soup each day, and I spend time chewing it instead of disposing of it rapidly as one does with a liquid. . . .

"First, get 10 cents worth of soup greens, comprising string beans, peas, carrots, parsnips, celery root, parsley, turnips, celery, and the outside leaves of cabbage, lettuce, and cauliflower. [This will depend upon what is in season at the time of purchasing.] After cleaning these thoroughly I put them through the coarse grinder of a food chopper.

"Second, next I add four potatoes with the skins on, five onions, and about as much garlic as you would feed a baby to find it in the dark. Then I add a wineglass full of flaxseed.

"Third, I take a two gallon aluminum kettle and place a gallon of water in it and boil the above mixture in it, and while it is boiling I add one cupful of salad oil with salt, pepper, sage, and curry powder to taste.

"Fourth, toward the latter part of the boiling [editor's interruption again—the gentleman means "simmering"] I add one can of tomato juice [two cups], one can of pork and beans, and two teaspoons of spicy kitchen sauce. Also add enough water to make about one and three-fourths gallons of soup. This is sufficient soup for me for one week. And, as often as I heat up a bowl of soup I add one handful of peanuts, and that is what makes me chew the soup!

"I am instructed by my doctor to use only pumpernickle bread. As this gets old and hard, I cut it in cubes and pour the hot soup over it. This, too, helped the chewing habit."

We have given Mr. C. G. T.'s recipe as he wrote it, but we are going to add a few instructions. The boiling he suggested is simmering, as we know it, over a very low flame. This should be carried on for two or three hours to insure the best flavor of the soup. Raw tomatoes may be substituted for the tomato juice, and they, too, should be added with their skins.

Many Laughs Mark Book by Stella Benson

'The Far Away Bride' Gets High Praise.

"The Far-Away Bride," by Stella Benson [Harper's]. Republished April 23.

"THE FAR-AWAY BRIDE," since it first appeared in this country, has been the recipient of two distinguished awards, the Femina Vie Heureuse prize of France and the Royal Society of Literature prize of England, and those facts account for its republication today.

STELLA BENSON.

Stella Benson, in a short introductory note to the reader, urges that he read the Appendix first. The Appendix contains the story of Tobit from the Apocrypha, the plot of which Miss Benson has closely paralleled in her book. She finds a resemblance between the story of the exiled Jew of the day of Tobit and the exiled White Russian of the present.

The scene of this novel is laid in the southeastern part of Manchuria, where the largest element in the population is Corean, the second largest Chinese, and the rest are Japanese with a sprinkling of exiled Russians. In the dirty, squalid town of Chi-tao-kou lives the Malinin family. They are a queer lot. The father is senile and fascinated by the idea of death. The son is a young, arrogant, strong, modern youth who mildly scorns and mildly tolerates his parents. The mother is huge and disorderly and stupid and adores her son. They manage to live somehow or other even after her husband's store has been looted and he has gone blind from hysteria or bird-droppings [none knows which]. They are a casual lot, happy and quarrelsome and filthy.

The old father, Sergei, decides that he will send his son to Seoul to collect the money he once lent to a distant relative. After much quarreling with his wife, who doesn't want her precious son to go on this dangerous journey, he sends the boy away, accompanied by Mr. Wilfred Chew, a Chinaman educated in England, a lawyer and a windbag. Many things happen on the long journey. Wilfred Chew talks every inch of the way, Seryozha catches a salmon, they get drunk, they meet the Ostapenko family, the daughter of which is known locally as "death" because she has broken hearts as well as seven engagements. Her young men in some way or other all go to the devil or kill themselves, exclaiming to the last that she is "death."

Seryozha falls in love with her, but is warned by her proud, garrulous but sympathetic father that he may die, too. In fact, the old man digs a grave in the yard for him. And so the story goes, following closely its apocryphal model.

The characters are brilliantly and incomparably delineated. Tatiana, with her curious apartness and horror of being touched [who, after all, is a warm hearted girl who simply hasn't found the right man]; Seryozha, with his boyish dislike of authority and of clinging, crying women; Old Man Ostapenko, who goes to absurd lengths to perpetuate the legend, within his family and without, that he is always and inevitably right—all these characters, along with the entire Malinin family and Mr. "Middle Temple" Chew, are irresistibly real, completely individual, and so essentially human that the reader touches and talks to them for 416 pages. Miss Benson pushes aside with leisurely but sure fingers all the wrapping paper, the layers of cotton and excelsior with which every one carefully pads and conceals his soul and exposes sympathetically the very essence of every personality. That essence is vanity.

There is no particular symbolism in this book nor any self-conscious and solemn philosophy of life. The book is a comedy of human personality, and Miss Benson neither approves nor disapproves of the human antics she portrays. There are passages so funny that the reader must put the book aside for a moment to stop laughing. And though there are these passages, many and untiring, that surpass some others in sheer mastery of the comic spirit in their delicious, beautiful, and delicate humor, the tone of the book as a whole is that of enveloping kindness and sympathy. This family buys more

. . . . Yet can be reached at less cost with advertising

This average Philadelphia family spends 37% more in retail stores than the average family in the United States.

The average Philadelphia family has a larger income to spend, and more urge to spend it. 85% of them live in individual homes; 55% of them own their own.

Philadelphia has all of the advantages of a select home-owning community—the thrift, the progressiveness, the permanence . . . plus all of the advantages of a great metropolitan market—in shipping, in selling, in distribution.

And in advertising, Philadelphia has an advantage seldom found . . . one newspaper is read in nearly every home; one cost for thorough advertising coverage of a great city market.

And that cost is the lowest advertising cost of any newspaper in America.

There is no short cut to substantial circulation in newspaper publishing. It is just a day-after-day task of careful editing, of presenting news in a way that wins confidence, of being accurate . . . timely . . . entertaining.

Just so has The Philadelphia Bulletin been edited through thirty-six years, making friends, winning a permanent place in the Philadelphia home.

Just so has it grown to 558,184 net paid daily circulation (average for 1931) without premium or contest, without scare headline or sensational display.

More than two and one-half times the circulation of any other Philadelphia evening newspaper, more than the total of all Philadelphia morning newspapers combined.

Just so may any worthy product build acceptance in this billion-dollar market—through the newspaper that reaches nearly every home, at the lowest cost of any newspaper advertising.

CUBS GO INTO TIE FOR LEAD; SHIFT OUTFIELD

WELL, WELL, SO COLLEGE BOYS GUZZLE BEER!

Surely Not at Ye Olde Sweete Shoppe?

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—It was my misfortune never to have heard of Ed Moriarity, a genial and kindly soul as the papers called him when he died recently, who seems to have conducted an eating house and beer parlor for the students of Yale through the coming and going of many a collegiate generation.

Often as I have visited New Haven for football practice and games, I have never discovered any place which conformed to my imaginary picture of the old college beerroom, chophouse, and free style singing and mooing club, and here, when this old fellow died recently, this Moriarity, it turned out that there had been a sort of hideaway going all the time where the beer, if not legal, was anyway full of vigor and vim and song and the rah rah spirit that gave college a meaning up to the second decade of the present century.

Not that it would do any good now, but I wonder where this Moriarity's place was, because the only places I ever discovered in or around New Haven were tiled lunchrooms, suggesting the typical Y. M. C. A. swimming pool; chop suey dens with sordid little booths lit by dusty candle fixtures, and a knuckle and kraut place where the waiter just barely might break out a few seidels of brew made from hay, dandelions, parsley, and yeast, if you could show letters from ten reputable bootleggers in your own home town.

Reminds You of Benny Havens.

I gather that this Moriarity could haul off and sing himself a right noisy and amusing earful of song, by no means complimentary to the Harvards, when the going was good, and the fact, if it is a fact, that he carried on the old business at the old stand for years after the great reform of 1919 would seem to qualify him for a place in the affections of the Yales similar to that which the late Benny Havens enjoys among the graduates of West Point.

Benny Havens was the first American bootlegger of record. He was kicked off the military reservation for selling rum to the cadets when he should have sold nothing but ale and wine, and thereafter maintained his bar just out of bounds until his death. When the Army plays football now there generally comes a pause in the ceremonies between the halves when the cadets and alumni remove their caps and, in subdued voices, sing to Benny Havens—O, the bootlegger, which might be construed as a serious violation of some regulation, and disrespect for the President.

How About A Song, Boys?

Ed Moriarity seems to have been a man on the order of Benny Havens and if he was all the man that the heigh-ho fellows said he was in their reminiscent writings when he died, it is up to some Yale to do him into a song so his soul will keep. "The Long, Long Trail" was written in his place, as I have been reading, but the recent Yales surely will not quit cold to that one, though that one is a very good song.

The apparent public dining and singing facilities for college students comprise one of the most forbidding aspects of college life nowadays, but there may be at other schools, as there seem to have been at Yale, facilities for dining and singing which are not apparent to the naked eye. Last fall, at Princeton, the coaches fired several young athletes off the football squad because they had been caught with foam on their noses in an obscure place in Trenton, and possibly there are still such places at Harvard, New Haven, Hanover, Champaign, Ann Arbor, Madison and other centers of education.

You Know These Places.

The college town Sandwich Shoppe or Coffee Pot is a pretty serious thing. It offers toasted sandwiches, waffle steaks, toasted cheese, peanut butter and ham and eggs, any style, with onions optional, and ice cream sodas in assorted flavors, with or without the whipped cream float, but you may search from Bowdoin in Maine to the University of Southern California and never find a three inch mutton chop. As to whether you will find beer, I would have said no until this Moriarity died just lately and, in his obituaries, revealed that he had been furnishing beer for the Yales without interruption all the time. Perhaps there is life in the college towns that a visitor just bouncing in and out of town does not discover.

The Yales may be a long time getting around to the writing of a song in honor of this Moriarity, but even if they never get it done, at least the old fellow ran up quite a score in the editorial columns of the papers when he died, and I have yet to hear any moaning of the bar when a soda clerk passed away. As a West Point cadet, Edgar Allen Poe brooded and scribbled in Benny Havens' resort, which he described as the only congenial spot in the whole place. "The Long, Long Trail" came out of Moriarity's. I would like to be reminded of anything that ever was inspired or written in Ye College Smoke Shoppe and quick lunch anywhere.

PHILLIES BREAK BRAVES' WINNING STREAK, 4 TO 3

Pass in 12th Forces In Deciding Run.

Boston, Mass., April 25.—[Special.]—The Phillies labored through twelve innings today to defeat the Braves, 4 to 3, thereby snapping Boston's winning streak at six straight. The defeat enabled the idle Chicago Cubs to climb into a tie for the National league lead with the Braves. Each has won eight games and lost three.

A pass to Pinch Hitter Taitt with the bases full served as an unusual climax to a pitchers' duel. It forced in the winning run in the twelfth. Ben Cantwell, who had relieved the veteran Tom Zachary in the tenth, was charged with the defeat.

Phil Collins, who pitched the first eleven innings for the Phillies, was credited with victory. He stepped out for a pinch hitter in the twelfth.

Big Red Worthington of the Braves pounded out a pair of home runs and Pinkey Whitney of the Philadelphia club picked up three singles and a double to lead the hitters of both teams. Score:

CARDS BEAT REDS, 4-2.

Cincinnati, O., April 25.—[Special.]—The St. Louis Cardinals climbed out of seventh place in the National league and pushed Cincinnati into the vacancy by defeating the Reds today, 4 to 2.

Chick Hafey's triple in the second inning, followed by Morrissey's double, gave the Reds a one run lead, but in the sixth the Cards got going when Frisch and Bottomley singled, Mancuso flied out, Collins doubled, and Gelbert came through with a hit to account for three runs.

The Reds played without two of their leading sluggers, Babe Herman and Mickey Heath, both of whom are ill. Score:

Pepper Martin's Shoulder to Keep Him Out 3 Weeks

St. Louis, Mo., April 25.—(AP)—Pepper Martin, St. Louis Cardinal outfielder and 1931 world's series hero, will be unable to play for three weeks as a result of his injury at Cincinnati yesterday. Dr. R. F. Hyland, club physician, examined Martin today upon his arrival here and diagnosed the injury as the rupture of a ligament in the left shoulder.

Helen Moody Arrives in New York; Sails Tomorrow

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody arrived in New York City today. She will leave here on Wednesday aboard the Aquitania for Paris, where she will compete in the French hard court tennis championship tournament on May 22 to June 25.

HARD WORK, BUT IT'S WORTH IT!

Walker Socks 4 Foes in Drill for Levinsky

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Mickey Walker is in town. And if the Stadium desired, King Levinsky and Walker could fight their ten round heavyweight battle tonight, such is the condition of the principals.

However, in consideration of those thousands of Chicagoans who are expected to purchase tickets this week, Levinsky and Walker must wait until Friday night before clashing in what probably is the year's most important bout except for Max Schmeling's title defense in June against Jack Sharkey.

Walker is in condition. There's no doubt about it. His appearance yesterday at Trafton's gymnasium, 189 West Randolph street, proved Manager Jack Kearns' contention that Mickey is ready to continue where he left off last summer when he fought 15 rounds with Sharkey to a draw decision.

Walker Wants Knockout.

With Walker in town, the rival camp followers have become more vociferous, if possible, on the merits of the boxers. Only a knockout will satisfy Walker, the Irishman's adherents say. They point out that a decision over Levinsky would have no special value, for many have outpointed the King.

When Levinsky fights, there's always the chance that he will drop his right hand on his opponent's chin. But, more surprising, yesterday there were some who insisted Levinsky can outpoint Walker. Of such stuff are wagers made.

Walker is domiciled at the Parkway hotel. There is no truth to the rumor that Kearns has employed a squad of National Guardsmen to watch all exits each night, for Walker, who likes to fight as much as he dislikes to train, has kept all his promises this time.

Boxes Five Rounds.

During his training period in the east Walker worked with heavyweights. Yesterday Kearns sent him against four lighter and faster sparring partners for five rounds. The workout was almost entirely defensive. Mickey Patrick, East Chicago 165 pounder, stepped two fast rounds with Mickey, Harry Schuman, welterweight; Sammy Levine and Babe Colima, featherweights, followed for one round each.

The Stadium ticket offices reported brisk business yesterday. The Stadium is scaled for $72,000 net receipts if all seats are sold. Gross sales including yesterday's are reported to exceed $33,000.

Mrs. Lena Levy, Levinsky's sister manager, the other Levinsky relatives, and Kearns have swung into their final ballyhoo. Each side charges the other with a willingness to take advantage of the rules, if any such advantage can be taken, and the result is the boxing commissioners have drawn up a few plans.

Guard Against Disputes.

"This fight is the most important of the year, except for Schmeling's title bout," Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois commission, said yesterday. "The commission will take precautions that no opportunity is afforded for dispute."

Clinnin, of course, referred to the

Battalino Ban Remains; Board Refuses to Act

Cincinnati, O., April 25.—[Special.]—No action on the indefinite suspension placed on Bat Battalino was taken today by the Cincinnati city boxing commission. Battalino was suspended and fined $5,000 after a fight with Freddie Miller here last winter.

Battalino will be stopped from going through with a match with Billy Petrolle at the Chicago Stadium next month unless the ban is lifted.

How I Got My Start in Baseball

BY PAT CARAWAY.
[As Told to Edward Burns.]

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—I decided when I was a pitcher for the Gordon, Tex., High school team that I wanted to be an American league pitcher so I could go to New York to see the tall buildings and meet Babe Ruth, who was and is a bigger hero to me than George Washington.

PAT CARAWAY.

It never occurred to me what Ruth might do to my pitching. All I wanted to do was to shake Babe's hand, call him by his nickname and have him call me Pat—just a couple of left handed pals.

The fact that Babe has made only one homer off me in two years hasn't lessened my admiration for him. I still think he is the greatest athlete of all time and that I am lucky that he hasn't plastered me more than he has.

When I wanted to go home after spring training for a few days my first year up, in 1930, to tend to some sick cattle in my herd, there was a lot of kidding when it was discovered that at the time I had only eight head. I now have 50 head of Herefords. The best beef cattle in the world, Herefords are, and next to striking out Goose Goslin in a pinch I love those 50 animals.

I am a firm believer in the theory that every ball player should have a herd against the day when he has to quit playing ball. I expect to play for many years, but each year I am going to add to my herd and when I get through with the game I'm going to be even a bigger rancher than my dad.

It's all right for ball players to spend their winters fishing and hunting and no one does more hunting and fishing than I do, but I still have time to tend my herd.

When both Babe and I get through I am going to ask him to come out to my ranch and if he accepts, I'm going to have a prize yearling dressed for him. Then he'll eat some steaks that are steaks.

COLD NO TONIC FOR SHATTERED NERVES OF SOX

Boys Are Jumpy as They Huddle About Stove.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—Here, indeed, is a jolly picture: The Chicago White Sox, a month ago reputed in some circles as destined to be the Pollyanna team of the baseball firmament and the happiness boys of the universe, huddled about the stove in their hotel lobby, housed in with their depressed spirits by a wicked, cold Detroit rain.

And as they sit and ponder they go back over their recent record of 53 consecutive innings with only two earned runs. When this ceases to intrigue them they replay Sunday's game with the Tigers—the one in which they were leading 9 to 2 with two out in the eighth only to lose with two out in the ninth, 10 to 9.

But food for thought does not end with these items. Hasn't Manager Fonseca made it clear that those who can't deliver must move on? The shunting of Mel Simons to the minors was the first evidence of the fate that awaits several gents who seem to like the big league life.

And There Are No Sacred Cows.

The trading of Bill Cissell and Jim Moore to Cleveland for Johnny Hodapp and Bob Seeds carried no terrifying thoughts in itself for most of the boys, for there are many who wouldn't mind being traded to any major league outfit with prospects better than those of the Chicagoans. But the transaction did reveal that the shakeup is on for sure and that there no longer are sacred cows in the Sox family.

As the pitiable group sits huddled in the lobby there is something cruelly suggestive of a coop of fattened turkeys on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving.

Mr. Fonseca on the Phone!

Manager Fonseca, now a full blown executive and pretty sore besides, rarely ornaments hotel lobbies with his presence. But today when he seeks to barge past his furtive employés, he doesn't get far. He's wanted on the long distance telephone. Probably that great little optimist and Sox loyalist, Harry Grabiner, is telling him about the status of another trade.

The players, ever watchful, can't always hear as well as they can see, but they know that some player who batted .230 last year has become a prospect to bat .400 for the Sox this summer. As Fonseca comes out of the booth all the players study his face and wonder if their laundry will be back in time in case they have to take a night train.

No Alibi, You Understand.

Suddenly the scene turns from one of apprehension to a roaring furnace of anger. Some one has mentioned Umpire Roy Van Grafian's ridiculous decision on Johnson at first base in the ninth inning jam of the big blow-up game yesterday. The boys aren't alibiing, understand, they admit that something else probably would have have overtaken them even had the umpire been efficient. They just want to point out how everything goes against a team when it's down.

Tomorrow is another day, though. And the Sox are to have another brand new lineup and batting order. This is what Manager Fonseca says it will be: Watwood, cf.; Selph, 3b.; Campbell, lf.; Hodapp, 2b; Fothergill, rf.; Blue, 1b.; Appling, ss.; Grube, c.; Jones or Hadley, p.

Appling will be on trial more than any of the foregoing. According to Fonseca he will be given a chance to calm down and show a sustained conduct approximating his best behavior. Otherwise they will try to make a shortstop out of Jack Hayes, the hitless fielding marvel.

INDIANS POUND BROWN PITCHERS FOR 10 TO 5 WIN

St. Louis, Mo., April 25.—(AP)—Clint Brown held St. Louis to six hits as the Cleveland Indians took the second of the series with the Browns, 10 to 5, in the only American league game played today.

Rick Ferrell slapped out a home run in the second to give the Browns a good start, but St. Louis was having a poor time both in pitching and hitting. For the rest of the contest the Indians held a lead. Vosmik of Cleveland contributed a home run in the seventh.

TAYLOR, MOORE START AGAINST PIRATES TODAY

Barton Is Benched; Baecht to Coast.

Although idle yesterday, the Cubs advanced to a tie for first place in the National league because Boston lost to Philadelphia, 4-3. It was the Braves' first defeat in seven games.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

After a twenty-four hour delay in their program because of uncomfortable weather, the Cubs expect to return to work this afternoon to build another story on their winning streak which now extends to four. The Pirates, who were booted around shamefully in that 12 to 3 affair on Sunday, will do the best they can to make the Cubs' daily toil a total loss.

In a pinch, yesterday's battle could have been staged without great discomfort to the athletes, but after noting the chilly qualities of the wind blowing across the field, President William Veeck decided there should be protection for any customers who might show up. The only way to provide the protection was to lock the gates.

Ed Baecht, who was with the Cubs all last season without making many appearances, was sent to the Los Angeles club yesterday. He was substituted for Pitcher Johnny Welch, who was turned over to the Angels, only to bounce back because the move conflicted with the rules governing options. Welch will be retained for the time being. It is possible that he might prove good material in a trade with some minor league club.

Pat Malone Gets Call.

Pat Malone, who would have pitched yesterday had a pitcher been needed, will be entrusted with raising the winning streak to five this afternoon. Either Swetonic or Harris will oppose him. For the final tomorrow Manager Hornsby can use Bob Smith, and that will leave Guy Bush and Charley Root for the first two of the series with the world champion Cardinals, who arrive Thursday.

The Cub outfield will be shifted for today's game. Riggs Stephenson will be in left, Johnny Moore in center as understudy for Ki Cuyler, who suffered a fractured bone in his left foot Sunday, and Danny Taylor in right. The outfielding members of the three Taylors possessed by the Cubs will be employed in Vin Barton's place. The latter hasn't been hitting, and if there is anything the Cubs need it is base hits.

If the Dan Tyalor experiment does not work out satisfactorily, there will be some more alterations. The next step would be to turn the place over to Lance Richbourg, the former Brave who always has been rated a fairly capable citizen with the bat. Then if another change should be necessary, Hornsby might try to play the outfield himself. He tried it once with the Cardinals and came dangerously close to being scalped by fly balls, but is willing to make another attempt if his bat will be of any help to the team.

Cuyler to Go Home.

Cuyler, his foot in a cast, paid another visit to the hospital yesterday, but merely for examination. The cast cannot be removed for three weeks, so he probably will make good use of his vacation by visiting his home at Harrisville, Mich. English, the other member of the Cubs bothered by an injury, will have the splint removed from his right index finger Saturday. It will be several days after that before he is able to resume play at shortstop.

WHITNEY, PHILS' CAPTAIN, CLIMBS TO BIG 6 CIRCLE

Arthur [Pinky] Whitney, crack third baseman and captain of the Phillies, climbed into the select circle of hitters yesterday, the result of a big afternoon in helping his club beat the Boston Braves, 4 to 3. Whitney bagged a double and three singles in five trips to boost his average to .333 and pass Bill Terry of the Giants, who was idle. Standings:

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—The Brookmeade stable's Raccoon, with Apprentice Jockey Coucci in the saddle, scored a brilliant victory over James Butler's Avaricious, 2 to 5 favorite, in the mile and 70 yards of the Clarendon Claiming handicap, which headlined the program at Jamaica today. Jamison finished third in the field of five.

Raccoon sprinted into the lead going to the first turn and was followed by the favorite. Bonnie Prince was well up in the early running, but weakened. On the back stretch Jockey Robertson, aboard Avaricious, waited until the colt had settled in his full stride. On the turn Raccoon hugged the rail and Avaricious was compelled to go to the outside and could not reach the leader in the final drive.

Raccoon Pays 4 to 1.

Raccoon passed the judges' stand a length and a half in front of Avaricious. The latter was two lengths ahead of Jamison. The winner closed at 4 to 1 and was timed in 1:43 2-5.

Flamborough, from the Belair stud, was awarded the decision in the five furlongs of the fifth event, when Little Lad, the winner, was disqualified for a foul. Little Lad opened up a long lead entering the stretch, but was set down for crowding at the start.

Four Pence Is Third.

Gyro, under a hustling ride by Jockey Robertson, finished a nose behind the winner. Four Pence, making his first start, showed a splendid effort to finish third in the official placing. The winner paid 4 to 1 and covered the distance in 1:01 1-5.

MOON MULLINS—EMMY'S CURIOSITY IS A GIFT

JACK ALEXANDER COMES BACK TO CHICAGO RACES

BY FRENCH LANE.

Old Jack Alexander will be in Chicago for the opening of the racing season. He's down in the $1,500 plater class now, his legs are not what they used to be, and he doesn't win very often. But he's traveling around with stylish companions, including Dr. Freeland, a Preakness winner of a few seasons back. Old Jack, Dr. Freeland, No More, and 13 others owned by Ben Creech and C. E. Davidson are to arrive at the Aurora track tomorrow morning from San Francisco.

Hunch players are wagering on Stepenfetchet, owned by Mrs. Jock Whitney, to win the Derby. If he gets home in front a regular Horatio Alger story will be unfolded. His jockey will be Buddy Ensor, who is making a sensational comeback in New York after being banned from the turf for a half dozen years. The odds against Stepenfetchet are 50 to 1 and the 8 to 1 to show against him looks pretty good to many so-called smart players.

Ald. Coughlin will mow the hay while the sun shines with his big racing stable this spring. He has his steeds quartered at Hawthorne and his colorbearers will go into action both at the Aurora track and at Sportsmen's Park in whatever races to which they are eligible. His Karl Eitel and First Regiment have been scorching the Hawthorne running strip in their workouts.

Charley Bidwill, secretary of the Illinois Turf association, is traveling on crutches. He turned steeplechaser and tried to hurdle a fence on the Stuyvesant Peabody thoroughbred breeding farm on Sunday, made a bad landing, and came up with a broken ankle.

Clockers who have been lining the rails at Sportsman's Park have passed out the word to watch the horses which E. F. Ogden will saddle. Aviator, Voltmeter, and Black Fool are among them. They know how to hug the rail all the way around the half mile track, say the railbirds.

Bookmakers in New York are going to make Top Flight, the Kentucky Derby favorite, prove that she's a champion before they will believe it. Tom Shaw says she will be at better than even money in the Woods Memorial handicap when she makes her first start on Saturday. Brandon Mint, Universe, Mad Pursuit, and Curacao are her most formidable rivals in the Woods.

Just when everybody was ready to count out Man o' War as a successful sire he has bobbed up with a couple of 3 year old sons this year, either of which might wind up as the champion of the division. They are Boatswain, conqueror of a good band of Derby eligibles at Havre de Grace yesterday, and Slave Ship. Most horsemen believe Slave Ship is the better of the two. Neither is eligible to the Kentucky Derby, but they both may go in the Preakness.

Two fine looking 2 year old daughters of the noted Morvich reached the Aurora track yesterday. Their names are Sweet Clair and Main Attack and they came in the shipment of horses W. W. Finn sent here from Lexington.

The Washington Park course will be thrown open for training purposes early next week. C. W. Hay, general manager of the track at Homewood, where the American Derby is run, says he has been assured that a great majority of the horses now racing in Maryland will reach Washington Park in time for the beginning of the season there on May 23.

Aurora's Inaugural handicap is shaping up as a rip-snorting battle. Dr. Freeland, Uncommon Gold, Burning Up, Karl Eitel, and Dowagiac are almost certain starters. Word came from Lexington last night that Tannery will be here for the race. Tannery has two victories to his credit this spring at Lexington.

MR. DUBB WHAMS POOR GOLF BALL WITH NO. 5 IRON

Then Learns Easy Swing Brings Best Results.

[This is the fifth of a series of articles by a novice golfer while taking a course of instruction from Harry Cooper, Glen Oak Country club professional.]

BY ELMER DUBB.

At the beginning of this school, President Gus Munch of Glen Oak dropped in on Teacher Cooper and myself one day and issued a warning that he was going to take slow motion pictures of me and my swing with his own camera. A movie of the first portion of yesterday's lesson might be entitled, "The Horrible Example, or, How Not to Approach the Green," so I hope Mr. Munch will hold up shooting on this scene until there have been a few more rehearsals.

When I came around for yesterday's lesson Harry sent me out on the putting green to limber up, and by remembering the tips he had given in the first lesson—taking a comfortable stance, allowing the arms to reach their fullest length, keeping my eye on the ball after drawing a line through it to the center of the hole, and gripping the club with my left hand, using the right only as a guide—I did fairly well.

Now, Elmer, Hit One.

Then Harry took me over to the practice tee, where we had been working on pitches and approaches the previous two days. He handed me a No. 5 iron [called a mashie by several generations of Dubbs], spread out a couple of dozen balls, and sent the caddy about 10 or 15 yards farther down the fairway than he had been in the other two lessons.

"We'll shoot 'em a little longer today," he said. "Just follow out the same idea in your swing as you did in the first two lessons on pitching, except to lengthen your back swing a bit, and add a little more power on the downswing. Shift your weight so that at the finish of the backswing it rests mostly on your right heel against the left toe.

I attempted to follow out this advice, but must have had designs on knocking the ball into Kane county. It flew off onto the first fairway.

"There was more than one reason for that happening," Harry said. "For one thing, you forgot one of the first principles of golf, that of keeping your eye on the ball. You took that remark about putting a little more power into the downswing too seriously. You don't have to murder the ball to get distance. Here, I'll show you what happens when you move your head."

Sun Helps Prove Point.

Harry again used the sun to illustrate his point. First he asked me to place three balls on the edges of the shadow of his head, and then told me to watch the shadow. It didn't move beyond the three balls until he had hit his own, and then followed through perfectly with the shifting of his weight from right to left. Meanwhile the ball went straight and far down the center of the fairway. Then he tried it without anchoring his head over the ball. The shadow moved beyond the three balls, he finished the swing with his shoulders knotted up, and the caddy was coming up to get the ball, which had not gone half way to him and furthermore had gone off to one side.

"If you keep your eyes on the ball, you won't commit another error common to golfers, that of raising the body with the swing. Just anchor your head above the ball and the rest will take care of itself. And try to bring the face of the club on the downswing back to the starting point keeping the blade of the club at right angles to the hole. That'll help you send it down the middle."

Does a Dubb Give Up? Never.

I tried, but was always forgetting this or that. Either I was trying to commit mayhem on the ball, or forgot to keep my head on it, or struck it from a flatfooted stance without shifting my weight. This went on for hours and hours, but Harry finally said, "Put them all together and they spell bad golf. Now try putting all the tips I've given you together for this last swing today."

I approached the crisis with fear and trembling, but Harry made me relax before swinging. The honor of the Dubbs was at stake, and I did not fail. The ball went 140 yards down the center of the fairway, and the caddy didn't have to come up ten feet for it. Mr. Munch and his camera should have been around for that one.

LONG IRON SHOT—RIGHT AND WRONG WAY

Elmer Dubb's approach shot won't go very far from this position. His backswing is not long enough to get any distance, and he has shifted so much weight to the right side that he's off balance.

Harry Cooper, left, shows how the weight should be distributed and the backswing lengthened for a long iron shot. The weight rests almost entirely on the right heel, with the left toe as a kind of brace.

WALKER ARRIVES SEEKING A GENT NAMED LEVINSKY

He'll Find Him in Ring at Stadium Friday.

meeting of managers and fighters on Friday afternoon immediately following the weighing-in. Such meetings are customary, but on Friday Clinnin will be more explicit in rules' interpretations.

It is customary to have a commission inspector in each corner. But, it was learned that Fred Gardner and George Getz, commissioners, also will serve as inspectors. In event of dispute, the commission will have first hand evidence. Gen. Clinnin will occupy his usual seat in the press row and will check with the timers. The referee and judges, who will not be named until Friday night, also will be given particular instructions.

Levinsky Scouts in Action.

Walker was well scouted in his first workout. Levinsky waited until after 4 o'clock for his drill in the Arcade gym while members of his family watched Mickey in action. Walker wore a patch under his right eye, but it was to protect the rapidly vanishing traces of a "shiner," and not a cut.

Kearns' scouts, who have seen Levinsky daily, also went into a huddle during the afternoon and submitted their findings.

The commission has cut the number of rounds on Friday's card to 40. The schedule as arranged follows:

Costas Vassis and Al Engle, 4 rounds.
Ruby Goldstein and Dick Sisk, 6 rounds.
Sammy Slaughter and Jack Moran, 6 rounds.
Ray Collins and Tony Herrera.
Vincent Parille and Baxter Calmes, 8 rounds.
Mickey Walker and King Levinsky, 10 rounds.

Parille Works Out.

NOTES OF THE BOXERS

Gen. John V. Clinnin, president of the National Boxing association, said yesterday that the International Boxing union will hold its annual meeting at Geneva, Switzerland, May 13, when it will make a rule to compel N. B. A. champions to fight I. B. U. titleholders before they can claim world championships.

The N. B. A. will be represented by Latrobe Cogswell, chairman of the Maryland Athletic commission. Others on the international championship committee who will be at the meeting are Thomas A. Murphy of the Canadian Boxing federation, Charles N. Donmall of the British board of boxing control, and Paul Rousseau of the International Boxing union.

Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, has been notified by the Illinois athletic commission that his suspension for using abusive language while handling Ernie Schaaf against Young Stribling at the Chicago Stadium several weeks ago exists only in Illinois. It had previously been announced that Buckley was suspended in all National Boxing association territory. Members of the Illinois board said the ban will hold until Buckley appears for a hearing.

Al Brown, bantamweight champion, was given additional time in which to defend his title when he informed the N. B. A. yesterday that he is leaving New York Saturday for Europe to defend his championship against Kid Francis at Paris. Brown also said he will box Dick Corbett, British champion, in England.

Gorilla Jones, middleweight champion, will start training for a defense of his title against Marcel Thil at Paris June 21 following his title match with Young Terry at Trenton, N. J., tonight. Tony Canzoneri, lightweight title holder, has been signed for a nontitle contest with Battling Gizzy of Donora, Pa., at Braddock, Pa., May 23.

AMATEURS' ALBUM By Charles Bartlett

WARREN DAWSON.

When George and Johnny Dawson began making a name for themselves as Chicago's most famous golfing brothers, there was a young caddy named Warren Dawson toting clubs out at Green Valley, the same club where George and Johnny had begun their careers. In between rounds, the young caddy practiced as much as he could, receiving considerable encouragement from E. A. Kelly, president of Green Valley. When George and Johnny weren't setting course records on the Wheaton layout, they helped their young brother smooth his swing and develop his putting touch.

Today that young caddy from Green Valley has grown up to be Illinois state amateur champion. He is listed at two strokes with his eldest brother on the 1932 Chicago District Golf association handicap roll, and is regarded as one of the district's leading contenders for national honors.

Johnny and George used to tell folks that the kid was coming along pretty well, but nobody realized it until he won the Du Page county amateur title. But he didn't push himself to the front until last summer during the state championship tournament at Quincy. He was not numbered among the favorites at the beginning of the meet, but kept winning until he reached the title round, and there defeated Stewart Gardner of Quincy, who was more familiar with the course layout than Warren.

WARREN DAWSON.

Warren is 24 years old and a graduate of Wheaton High school, where he played baseball and football when he wasn't concentrating on golf.

Want a Doctor? Thompton Can Sprint to You in a Hurry

[This is the seventh of a seriess of sketches of university track and field stars in the central states.]

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Coach Sherman Finger of the University of Minnesota track team, who will referee the Drake relays this week at Des Moines, Ia., may have the satisfaction of seeing one of his protégés win the 100 yard dash. This sprinter, Hal Thompton, probably won't be timed faster than within one-fifth of a second of the Drake relay record, but if he does that well he not only should win the event but he will have proved his ability to the athletes of the central states.

Thompton is a sophomore, a student in the Minnesota medical school. With two more years of competition he is expected to develop into one of the best sprinters in the Big Ten.

Near Tolan, Simpson Class.

Thompton carries on in place of Johnny Haas, sprint record holder at Minnesota and captain of the track team who left school last fall. Already Thompton has shown he will be the equal of Haas and that he soon will be in the class of such former Big Ten athletes as George Simpson of Ohio State and Eddie Tolan of Michigan.

Twice during the indoor season Thompton ran 60 yards in 6.3 seconds. In the Western conference meet at Chicago he was beaten a step by Don Renwick of Michigan. Renwick was forced to travel the distance in 6.2 seconds, which mark tied the conference and world record.

Thompton is said to be better at 100 yards. His work outdoors, which started with a victory in the tenth annual Kansas relays last Saturday, bears proof. At Kansas Thompton won the hundred in 9.7 seconds. If he can equal that mark this week at Drake he should be returned the winner. Peyton Glass of Oklahoma Aggies, who defeated Tolan last year at Drake, was timed in 9.7 seconds. Glass will be back this week-end to defend his championship.

Drake Record 9.5 Seconds.

The Drake record is 9.5 seconds and is held by Gordon Locke of Nebraska. Tolan still holds the recognized world record at the same time, but Frank Wycoff has been recognized as the American champion on the strength of two dashes in 9.4 seconds. Wycoff undoubtedly will be given official world recognition at the next meeting of the international committee.

Klaner of Kansas finished next to Thompton last week. He and such stars as Metcalfe, Marquette; McCormick, Notre Dame; and Renwick will face the starter at Drake.

Thompton's home is Montevideo, Minn., where he gained recognition as the best prep sprinter in the state. He is 22 years of age. He has confined his track work to the dashes and, as a result, probably has his best races ahead of him.

SASSAFRAS TIME ADDS FLAVOR TO DUNELANDS TRIP

Outdoor Fan Remembers Mother's Tea.

BY BOB BECKER.

The average outdoor fan finds that this time of the year is one full of experiences if he is interested in birds, because the migrants are coming up from the south in increasing numbers. However, this season of the year not only brings the sportsman a chance to use his eyes and a pair of binoculars but also his tongue when he goes into the open, provided, of course, that the "sampling game" goes hand in hand with some knowledge of the plants and shrubs.

One of the trees in Chicagoland always associated in our mind with spring and the "sampling game" is the sassafras. In the old days mothers used to brew a tea from sassafras, as it was considered a good spring tonic. It may still be used for this purpose, although it has been many years since we sipped any of this brew.

You'll Find It in Dunes.

Sassafras grows in Chicagoland, especially in the dunes region, southeast of Chicago. At least, that is where we have seen the most sassafras trees. In southwestern Michigan, where you find a continuation of the Indiana dune formation, it also is quite common. If you are not familiar with this tree most any native can point it out to you. Crush a few leaves and you get the perfume from them immediately. Or, better yet, pick two or three slender stems and chew them to secure the delicious flavor of this tree, which has played such a prominent part in home medicine chests for many years.

If an outdoorsman doesn't think much of sassafras as a spring tonic he must not pass it up as a mosquito repellant, because the oil of sassafras, in combination with other ingredients, is useful in mosquito dopes.

Look for Watercress.

If on a cross-country hike you pass near spring brooks look for the watercress, as this delicious plant gives one a chance to use his tongue. We have gathered many a basket of this and brought it home for salad purposes. The watercress is found throughout the middle west and in some clear water brooks, especially around spring holes, it grows so thickly that it almost hides the surface of the water.

There is one plant that should be left alone in the woods. It's the only one that we know of suffering from halitosis. This is the widely distributed skunk cabbage, a big leafed, vile smelling thing that flourishes early in the spring. It is well named and one bite of this cabbage is guaranteed to keep a fellow out of the woods forever.

Pritzlaff, director of physical education for the board of education, announced yesterday that 300 high school athletes from Schurz, Senn, Lake View, and Lane Tech have been given tickets to attend tomorrow night's light heavyweight championship wrestling elimination tournament at the Rainbo Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue.

Five matches are on the tournament card, with Lou Talaber meeting John Kilonis for two falls out of three in the main event.

In the Wake of the News

DERBY PROSPECTS.

FOR the 58th Kentucky Derby, to be run at Louisville May 7, there promises to be wider spread of public opinion than in those recent years when Reigh Count, Gallant Fox, and Twenty Grand almost monopolized speculative attention.

Naturally, developments between now and Derby day will weed out many now possible starters or so minimize their chances that none but owners and trainers will give them thought. Thus from the present list of about 30 possible starters the actual field will dwindle to 12 or 15.

Top Flight, a filly, is now ante-post favorite. This is by reason of her 2 year old championship by which she became the leading money winner of 1931 with $219,000, surpassing by less than $500 the earnings of the 3 year old Twenty Grand. Top Flight has been training satisfactorily and is expected to go to the post next Saturday in the Wood Memorial stake as a Derby trial.

If Top Flight wins that event or makes a Derby caliber showing she probably will be post favorite at Louisville, but not to the same extent as would a colt. That old tradition, "Fillies don't win Derbies," still carries wide influence. That is why the present Derby is likely to be regarded as "more open," no matter which colt or filly is made favorite.

At the present writing Tick On and Burgoo King, which finished second and third, respectively, to Top Flight in the Pimlico Futurity, and Burning Blaze, Chicago owned, are other leading contenders. At least a score of others are being prepared. Final workouts or race tests will determine whether or not they face the barrier about 6 o'clock Chicago time a week from Saturday.

At this time the 1932 Derby in its advance prospects is one of the most interesting of recent years. Because it precedes the Preakness for the first time in many years it is the first really big stake race of the season for 3 year olds. That naturally makes it uncertain, because the Preakness heretofore has weeded out many eastern candidates.

Chicago attendance at Louisville has decreased for several seasons, due both to depression and high class racing in our own city. Otherwise, The Wake anticipates a large crowd despite present business conditions, but a falling off in volume of mutuel speculation because people have not the money for such purposes they once had. From the viewpoint of contention it may be the greatest Kentucky Derby of recent years.

Fate.

I was just a name to you;
You were some one's brother.
Naught in common had we two,
Still we met each other.

Strange the way the months have brought
Our wildest dreams come true;
Now I find your heart I've caught
And I am loving you. Honey Girl.

Cost of Golf Is Reduced at Elmhurst

Members of the Elmhurst Golf club will be paying approximately 20 per cent less for playing this year than they did last, according to an announcement made by President C. Earl Pritchard at a recent meeting.

The most important reduction in the new program is in dues, which have dropped from $150 annually to $120. A nonequity playing membership of $120 for 1932 also has been authorized, entitling the holder to all club privileges except voting.

Other reductions approved follow: Locker room fees, from $10 to $8 a year; golf club cleaning, from $1.25 to $1 a month, and caddy fees, class A, from $1 to 75 cents, and class B, from 80 cents to 65 cents. Meals will be approximately 15 per cent less than formerly.

Ralph Chrissie, professional at Silverlake Country club, and Art Sweet will be the speakers today at a noonday luncheon and meeting of the Cooperative club of Chicago at the Hamilton club. Emil Kabella is golf chairman of the organization, which plans to hold two tournaments a month throughout the season.

Volture 220 of the Forty and Eight will hold its first tournament of the season Thursday at the River Forest Country club, Grand avenue, three miles west of Mannheim road. John Devere will be chairman of the day. Bill Wilson is handling reservations.

RUM ISSUE BOBS UP AT SESSION OF WOMEN VOTERS

Wet Detroit Delegates Insist on Debate.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—Each succeeding convention of the National League of Women Voters finds the moot problem of the eighteenth amendment bobbing up, begging to be discussed. Each time it has been ruthlessly smothered, denied a place on the program of the nonpartisan, conservative league. And each recurrence finds it apparently stronger than before, harder to stifle.

MISS JESSIE BINFORD.

At the moment, the most promising development of the current tenth convention of the league, in session at the Book-Cadillac hotel here, is not to be found in the preliminary schedule of the proceedings. But chatter in the corridors indicates that this gathering in an acknowledged wringing wet territory will precipitate at the least a spirited effort fer a resolution in favor of a referendum.

Urge Debate on Prohibition.

Already some of the Detroit women are known to have urged strongly, in the preconvention gatherings, that the powers that be of the organization take cognizance of the considerable sentiment against prohibition and that some discussioin follow on the floor when the business session opens on Wednesday.

At the preceding convention held in Louisville, Ky., an effort by its proponents to gain it a place on the program of study, was unsuccessful because it was deemed to expensive an item to obtain data on, and the point was cited that all such data was of rather dubious accuracy.

Mrs. Myron Vorce, a prominent Detroiter, who is one of the convention chairmen and who also is an official of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, was speaking out of town today for the latter group. Her return tomorrow may presage a concerted effort by the "wet" forces within the league to precipitate the matter into the limelight more successfully than before.

Two Chicagoans Speak.

Two Chicagoan women were among the speakers on the open conferences that occupied the afternoon. Mrs. Quincy Wright, head of the Cook County league, talked on "Economic Coöperation" in the largest gathering under the auspices of the department of international coöperation to prevent war. Mrs. Wright is the wife of a professor at the University of Chicago, a recognized authority on international law.

Miss Jessie Binford, the second Chicagoan to contribute to the day's program, discussed the problem of child offenders against federal laws before the committee on child welfare. Her remarks especially were pertinent in view of the fact that one of the principle items submitted for adoption in the program of work for the next two years is the protection and treatment of such child offenders.

A study made of the subject, declared Miss Binford, who is superintendent of the Juvenile Protective association, showed that 66 per cent of these youngsters are arrested under the immigration and prohibition statutes. There were found to be on one check up 22,243 boys and girls in jail under federal laws, she said, 500 under 16. Virtually all such offense being no more serious than those dealt with in Juvenile courts.

CHICAGO AREA OFFERS MIXED BUSINESS DATA

Factory Trend Down Bank Group Says.

BY O. A. MATHER.

There is no gainsaying that industry and trade are abnormally dull, but whether the current tendency is toward improvement or further contraction is anybody's guess. The statistical reports are unusually conflicting. Thus, the monthly review of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank finds that the early spring improvement has been nullified in the middle west. On the other hand, some evidences of improvement are reported by the Standard Statistics company.

"Reporting firms in the seventh district reduced employment 2 per cent and pay rolls 7 per cent between Feb. 15 and March 15, more than canceling the gains of the preceding period," the Chicago reserve bank says. "Pay rolls totaled lower than in any previous month of recent years, and both employment and pay rolls reached new low levels in four manufacturing and two nonmanufacturing groups.

"The losses in manufacturing were sharper than in nonmanufacturing and compared with a traction gain in both number of men and wages in March of the previous seven years. As the decline in pay rolls exceeded that in number of men, average weekly earnings of all employés fell from $23.30 on Feb. 15 to $22.13 on March 15.

Less Than Seasonal Gains.

"One group, stone-clay-glass, recorded a less-than-seasonal improvement in both men and pay, and two others, chemicals and leather, gained fractionally in number of employés. Coal mining pay rolls rose sharply as a result of longer operating schedules in anticipation of a shutdown during consideration of a new wage rate agreement.

"All other groups reduced both the number of employés and their earnings, the losses ranging from 6 to less than 1 per cent in employment and from 21⅓ to 1½ per cent in pay rolls. In addition to seasonal declines in food, textiles, the utilities and merchandising, several groups moved counter to their usual March expansion. Vehicles, influenced largely by the automobile industry, reversed the improvement of the preceding four months and recorded the second March decline in eight years covered by our records. Wood products and construction both moved lower in contrast to the trend in previous years.

"Four states of this district shared in the decline of farm wages throughout the country between Jan. 1 and April 1. Seasonally greater demand in three states offset further gains in farm labor supply, resulting in slight improvement in the ratio of supply to demand."

Some Upward Trend.

In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics company comments as follows:

"Certain evidences of moderate spring trade expansion have become apparent during the last week. These slight increases have been recorded largely in those lines either catering directly to the ultimate consumer or affected by direct consumer trade. They have been magnified to some extent when comparison is made with the declining trend in evidence a year ago.

"Retail trade has continued the close to seasonal upturn witnessed earlier in April, largely under the bneflt of more seasonable spring weather. Reflecting this belated buying, miscellaneous and less than carlot freight has moved in somewhat heavier volume. Bank clearings likewise have moderately increased, under the same influence.

"In the producing divisions of general industry, the upturn has been somewhat less apparent. Even here, however, scattered advances have been recorded. Continued advances in this classication will depend largely upon the trend of automobile output."

Raise Commercial Loans.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—The federal reserve banks' program of encouraging banks to grant more liberal credit to commercial enterprises appears to be making progress. While the reporting member banks reduced their loans on securities by $17,000,000 during the week ended April 20, they increased their commercial loans by $16,000,000. At the same time, these banks increased their investments in government securities by $16,000,000 and in other securities by $46,000,000. They reduced their borrowings at the reserve banks by $59,000,000. Their deposits expanded $103,000,000.

Large oversubscription for the $50,000,000 of 91 day treasury bills offered last week was reported by the treasury department. Total subscriptions were $241,451,000 but only $51,550,000 was awarded. The average price was 99.841, which affords a yield of 63-100ths of 1 per cent on a bank discount basis. Books on the $225,000,000 of one year 2 per cent certificates of indebtedness and $225,000,000 of two year 3 per cent treasury notes, which were offered yesterday, have been closed.

Urges U. S. Commission Pass on Foreign Securities

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Creation of a commission to pass upon the sale of foreign securities in the United States was proposed in a resolution today by Representative Fish [Rep., N. Y.]. The group would consist of the secretaries of state, treasury, and commerce, the chairman of the federal reserve board and the controller of the currency.

Before the sale of any foreign securities to the general public, including banks and insurance companies, would be allowed, the consent of a majority of this commission would be necessary.

Railroads Add Air Comfort to Their Cars

BY SCRUTATOR.

Two or three years ago the conditioning of air in railway passenger cars was a laboratory experiment: today its general acceptance is regarded as inevitable.

When the carriers first began to consider air conditioning as a stimulant for declining passenger business they hoped it would catch on. Now it is developing so fast that they are being forced to install equipment before they have had an opportunity to determine which of the numerous cooling plans is cheapest and best.

The comfort of conditioned air has appealed strongly to the public wherever it has been tried out. Lowered temperature in hot weather is only one of its attractions. Air conditioned cars, being tightly sealed, are cleaner and quieter.

B. & O. as Pioneer.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad has been one of the pioneers in this line. In 1930 two of its trains between New York and Washington were equipped with cooling devices. Last year two other trains on that run were similarly equipped. On April 20 the National Limited, crack St. Louis-Washington train, was added to the list, and next month the Capitol Limited will follow.

"The patronage of these trains, particularly during the summer months, has been gratifying and, with the experience gained and further study, it is contemplated to improve and expand this service," said Daniel Willard, president of the road, in his annual report two days ago.

The Baltimore and Ohio conditions the air in all cars on the train, "everything but the engine cab," as one official puts it. The Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, in its new "George Washington," put into operation last Sunday between Cincinnati and Washington, follows the same sytsem. Day coaches, sleepers, diners, even the baggage cars, are cooled.

Pennsylvania Also Acts.

The Pennsylvania has ordered all dining cars on limited trains sent to Altoona to be equipped for air conditioning before Memorial day. The Pennsylvania and the Illinois Central have been experimenting with "precoolers," ice trucks from which cool air is pumped into cars standing in the station.

Diners on the Overland, Los Angeles, Golden State, and Sunset limiteds and the Columbine, running over the Chicago and North Western, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific lines, are now at the plant of the Pullman Car and Manufacturing corporation receiving their cooling equipment.

The Santa Fe made a start with the dining cars on the Chief and have decided to keep the passengers cool on the California and Grand Canyon limiteds and other trains carrying that class of equipment.

The Missouri-Kansas-Texas, the Burlington, the Rock Island, and other lines are prominently mentioned in connection with the trend toward air conditioning. The New York Central is watching developments closely.

Trains Made Faster, Too.

The speeding up of a number of important trains this spring, together with this development of air conditioning, indicates a growing conviction among railroad men that the most effective way to meet highway competition is to provide speed and comfort.

As for air conditioning, it has only begun. There seems to be no good reason to believe that people who want to be comfortable on trains will be content with the temperature at home.

House cooling devices are continually being improved. Robert G. Guthrie and Dr. Oscar J. Wilbor, research men for the Peoples Gas, Light and Coke company, this week announce the discovery of "lamisilite," a new product which removes moisture from the air after it has been cleansed and cooled.

Air conditioning is a new industry arisen to satisfy a new demand. It does not depend for its success upon the decay of some older established industry. Every man that it hires means one less in the army of unemployed.

RAILROAD CREDIT GROUP SEEKS AID OF FINANCE CORP.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—The railroad Credit corporation cannot get enough money to meet the appeals of carriers for funds to pay fixed interest charges and is endeavoring to have the Reconstruction corporation carry a considerable portion of the load.

This became known today through a letter received by the interstate commerce commission and the Reconstruction corporation from R. W. Barrett, vice president and general counsel of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company. Barrett sent a copy of a letter he had received from E. G. Buckland, president of the Railroad Credit corporation, formed to gather and disburse money derived from freight rate increases, which went into effect January 4.

The Lehigh Valley has asked the Railroad Credit corporation to loan it $1,500,000 to cover fixed interest obligations due May 1. It also has applied to the interstate commerce commission for a similar loan from the Reconstruction corporation.

"The Railroad Credit corporation," Buckland wrote, "does not have funds available for making such a loan at this time or in sufficient time to meet the requirements of the carrier, having due regard to the requirements and needs of other carriers and to other loans already authorized by this corporation.

GREEK CABINET VOTES TO DROP GOLD STANDARD

Premier Carries Out Own Plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, April 25.—Unable to weather the financial storm any longer, Greece slid off the gold standard today. The action was no surprise. Premier Eleutherios Venizelos returned to Athens Thursday from Geneva, angry at the league delegates for not having met his demand for a five year moratorium and a $50,000,000 loan.

He promptly announced the intention of abandoning the gold standard. George Maris, minister of finance, protested and resigned. Venizelos quickly appointed another, Kriakos Varvaressos, a professor of Athens university, who agreed with the premier that Greece is unable longer to remain on the gold standard.

Decision Promptly Made.

Today the ministerial council decreed that the drachma no longer is linked with gold.

For many weeks central European financiers have realized that Greece, like Austria and Hungary, could not hold out much longer without both relief in the form of a moratorium and a loan. The gold reserves of the Bank of Greece have fallen in recent months from $56,000,000 to $18,000,000. The budget deficit alone this year is more than the gold holdings, being estimated at $24,000,000.

In addition to that, $13,000,000 are needed by the government to finish urgent works such as drainage and irrigation upon which millions have already been expended and which cannot be abandoned.

Recently the league financial committee turned down Venizelo's demand for a $50,000,000 loan and a five year moratorium but recommended a loan of $10,000,000 and suspension for a year of all payment into the sinking fund on foreign loans.

Premier Can't Wait.

A fortnight ago when Venizelos showed up at Geneva the league council asked him to wait until May. He said he could not, reminding them that Greece had large payments due May 1.

It is reported that the government has not yet decided whether to declare a straight moratorium as Hungary did or negotiate suspension of payments directly with the holders of Greek foreign loans.

U. S. Gold Stock Declines.

New York, April 25.—(AP)—The country's monetary stock of gold decreased $3,982,100 today as a result of a substantial increase in the earmark account. The actual rise in earmark was $4,001,200, against which there was an import of $19,100 from Mexico. There were no exports.

The pound sterling today broke out of the narrow rut it had recently been following and tumbled more than 7 cents to a closing cable rate of $3.67¼. Some dealers attributed the break to absence of official support, although there were rumors that some French balances were being withdrawn from London. Premiums on sterling futures remained unchanged.

French francs made a recovery, advancing about a quarter of a point, although they were still under the gold point. Dutch guilders and Swiss francs improved, but Norwegian and Danish rates followed sterling. Word that Greece was suspending the gold standard was received quietly. There was no business in the drachma and the rate held nominally at the recent gold rate, 1.28¾ cents.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

An Associated Press dispatch from Springfield, Ill., which appeared in THE TRIBUNE April 22 stated that the commerce commission had granted the Alton railroad permission to discontinue passenger trains numbers 23 and 24 running between Chicago and Bloomington. Officials of the railroad state that the commission approved the discontinuance of the trains on Sunday only and that they will continue to operate week days on the usual schedule.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR NOTES OF NEW YORK STATE

New York, April 25.—(AP)—A New York state offering of $75,000,000 2¾ per cent short term notes, was 100 per cent oversubscribed, State Controller Morris S. Tremaine announced this afternoon. The notes are dated May 1, 1932 and mature May 2, 1933. Proceeds will be used in anticipation of taxes and other revenues.

On March 31 the state marketed an issue of $50,000,000 3¾ per cent notes due on Jan. 15, 1933 at par. The lower rate carried by the new issue is regarded by bond dealers as a commentary on the improvement that has taken place recently in the investment market.

BRITAIN VOTES HUGE FUND AS STERLING GUARD

Treasury to Control Foreign Exchange.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 25.—The house of commons approved tonight a proposal to establish an "exchange equalization account" of $600,000,000 for the purpose of strengthening the currency and checking undue fluctuations in the exchange value of sterling—the kernel of Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain's budget last week.

The object, sanctioned after long debate, is to make the British government, acting through the Bank of England, the master in its own house of the price of sterling. The proposal received unanimous support, the Labor opposition accepting the government's policy and even claiming through its spokesmen that it was Labor's original iden. The resolution authorizing it was agreed on without division after the government accepted a Labor amendment that the fund would be under control of the treasury.

In the absence of Chancellor Chamberlain because of illness, Maj. Walter

Find Kreuger Stamps with 'Forged' Names

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

STOCKHOLM, April 25.—In Ivar Kreuger's private room in the match trust offices the police have found rubber stamps giving facsimile signatures of prominent persons. Apparently Kreuger had a stamp made whenever any signature, which he considered might be worthwhile, came into his possession. It is thought these stamps were used in making bogus share applications.

Kreuger Prey of Women.

Many blackmail demands sent to Kreuger by women also were discovered. He appears to have paid money to many. There also was a list of Kreuger's agents throughout Europe through whom he bought and sold a large number of his shares, thus making big profits.

Meanwhile the police here continue to question four men under detention. A fresh stream of witnesses is being called. Their evidence is said to incriminate many persons and further arrests are said to be imminent.

France to Change Contract.

PARIS, April 25.—As a result of the Kreuger revelations the French government is considering modification of its contract with the Swedish Match company which supplies the monopoly here with most of its matches and also distributes to the public. However, it is denied that France contemplates denouncing the contract entirely.

The original agreement was made in 1926 between Ivar Kreuger and the

New York, April 25.—Lacking influential news, the stock market was content to sit tight and await developments today. Price movements were extremely narrow, trading dull, volume falling off to around 600,000 shares, the smallest full session since Feb. 4.

The senate committee's decision to undertake a "full and complete" investigation of the market aroused wide concern. There was no disposition, however, to grow panicky over that. Indeed, as far as a study of the chart showed, it failed to influence either the trend or the pace of op-

CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD CROSSES LOOP

Moves Into New Quarters on the Rialto.

BY AL CHASE.

The Chicago Real Estate board, of which J. Soule Warterfield is president, yesterday completed its removal from 57 West Monroe street, where it had been for the last 12 years, to its new quarters on the 19th floor of the former Masonic Temple building, 32 West Randolph street, since rechristened the Chicago Real Estate Board building. The decorating has been completed, the office furniture installed and the board yesterday continued its regular operations in its new quarters.

J. SOULE WARTERFIELD. [Wallinger Photo.]

The dining room on the 20th floor, just above the offices, is still in the hands of workmen, and will be for several days. Windows have been cut through on the north wall. On the east wall, instead of taking advantage of a magnificent view over the lake and cutting through wide low windows which would give the entire dining room glimpses eastward, ordinary sized openings are being put in. The suggestion made to several officials that the board was overlooking the dining room's biggest asset—its magnificent lake view—elicited little interest. The building manager's only comment was that "the windows must be in line"; there could be no irregularity, even at the expense of losing a view few cities can boast.

To Have Housewarming.

The realty board will have a formal housewarming next Monday evening at which women will be invited for the first time since the organization was formed in 1883. It is expected to be the most elaborate social affair the board has ever held, with a thousand or more expected to attend. The big auditorium on the 14th floor of the Chicago Real Estate Board building will be used for dancing and entertainment.

On the day following the housewarming, Tuesday, May 3, the board's new dining room will be open under the supervision of Fred Gimbel, proprietor of Gimbel's restaurant, in the basement. William C. Regelin, chairman of the board's publicity department, points out that with its large dining room, much larger office space and the use of the large auditorium on the 14th floor, the Chicago Real Estate board can hold a national realty convention entirely in the one building, something no other realty board in the country would be able to do.

Law Firm Leases Space.

The law firm of Deneen, Healy & Lee has leased the front half of the thirteenth floor of the Harris Trust building for a term of years. This space, comprising about 5,000 square feet, formerly was occupied and is under lease until April 30, 1933, to the Cudahy Packing company, which moved to the La Salle-Wacker building and is occupying the 8th, 9th, and 10th floors. Deneen, Healy & Lee are now in the State Bank building and will move to the Harris Trust building on May 1. The lease was negotiated by Dibblee & Manierre, agents for the La Salle-Wacker building. Albert Y. Adcock represented the Harris Trust building.

Title to the six story Yorkshire Apartment hotel at 2505 South Michigan avenue has been conveyed by master's deed by George S. Lether and others to Henry Van Gelder, a florist, and Laurence H. Gen'l Motors Has Earnings of $9,693,027

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—Net earnings of the General Motors corporation, largest unit in the industry, reflected the sharp falling off in demand for automobiles in the first quarter this year, in comparison with the corresponding period of 1931.

Results for the initial quarter of this year, including equities in the undivided profits or losses of subsidiary and affiliated companies not consolidated, amounted to $9,693,027, according to the report issued today by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., President.

Per Share Earnings.

After deducting dividends on the preferred stock, the balance of $7,348,820 applicable to the common stock was equal to 17 cents a share, and compared with $28,999,409 for the corresponding period of last year, which, after preferred dividend requirements, was equal to 61 cents a share on the common.

Cash, United States government, and other marketable securities at the close of the quarter amounted to $186,777,639, compared with $205,029,119 at the close of 1931, and $179,133,114 a year earlier.

Capital About Same.

Net working capital was approximately the same as at the year end, amounting to $271,536,282, contrasted with $273,915,923. On March 31, 1931, the amount was $292,723,601.

"During the quarter ended March 31, 1932, General Motors dealers in the United States delivered to consumers 143,514 cars, compared with 231,881 cars in the corresponding period of 1931," Mr. Sloan said. "Sales by General Motors operating divisions to dealers in the United States during this period amounted to 166,304 cars, compared with 255,997 cars in the first quarter of 1931.

MISSOURI PACIFIC REPORTS DROP IN ITS REVENUE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—Freight revenue of the Missouri Pacific railroad decreased from $99,779,356 in 1930 to $79,709,811 in 1931, or by almost 20 per cent, according to the report of President L. W. Baldwin.

Revenue tonnage decreased 19.3 per cent and ton miles 20.7 per cent. Passenger revenue decreased from $10,210,815 to $7,131,655, or by 30 per cent. The number of passengers decreased 34 per cent and passenger miles decreased 27.9 per cent.

The International-Great Northern railroad, a subsidiary, increased its freight revenues from $11,845,471 in 1930 to $15,280,381 in 1931, or by 29 per cent, as a result of oil movement from the east Texas field.

"Crude oil production increased rapidly and reached its peak in the middle of August, when the field was producing more than 1,000,000 barrels of oil daily," Mr. Baldwin said. In the week ended Aug. 16 the International-Great Northern handled an average of 888 cars of crude and refined oil daily. In 1931 the railroad loaded 86,860 cars of crude oil and 7,845 cars of refined oil from this field and the inbound movement, consisting of oil well supplies and building materials, amounting to about 13,000 cars."

Mr. Baldwin pointed out, however, that enforcement of oil conservation by martial law on Aug. 17 completely ended production for two weeks and held production to about 400,000 barrels daily for the rest of the year. Meanwhile, pipe lines were built with a capacity of about 750,000 barrels daily.

REXALL AGENTS GUESTS TONIGHT AT DINNER HERE

The Rexall agents and their wives who are attending the Illinois Rexall convention at the La Salle hotel will be guests of the United Drug company at the convention banquet and dance to be held tonight. This banquet will conclude the two day convention during which the agents discussed 1932 problems.

Rexall drug stores, independently owned, are the exclusive agents of the United Drug company, world's largest producer of drug store merchandise. This company was founded in 1903 by Louis K. Liggett, its president, to help independent druggists secure better quality merchandise and to protect them against price cutting. There are now 10,000 Rexall drug stores in the United States and Canada.

B. F. Goodrich.

I shall appreciate any information you can give me regarding Goodrich company stock, not the preferred, as to when they dismissed the dividend, what was the dividend rate, and how the company's financial standing is at present.—J. J. P.

B. F. Goodrich company, established about fifty years ago, is one of the four leading producers of tires. Automobile tires account for half of total production, footwear 28 per cent, and miscellaneous rubber goods the remaining 22 per cent.

The industry is burdened with overcapacity. There has been some mortality among the smaller manufacturers, but increased manufacturing efficiency and the longer life of tires have more than counterbalanced the effect of this on the remaining manufacturers.

Tire companies in the last two years have seen profits wiped out by large inventory losses due to unparalleled declines in prices of rubber and cotton, their raw materials. Declining material costs have been reflected in reduced selling prices for the product.

In 1928 a subsidiary was organized to operate a chain of stores to sell tires at retail. Goodrich has a selling arrangement with Standard Oil company [N. J.] under which service stations will also act as retailers of tires. These appear to be moves to maintain its position in the replacement field against the competition of large scale merchandisers, such as mail order houses, handling products of competitors.

Sales for 1931 were $115,165,000, against $155,256,000 for 1930, $164,495,000 for 1929 and $148,805,000 for 1928. Net loss in 1931 was $8,807,000. This was after writedown of inventory losses and reserve for foreign exchange losses. These adjustments totaled $6,005,000.

Loss for 1930, before adjustments of $1,935,000, was $8,374,000. Net income for 1929 was $7,446,000, against $3,513,000 for 1928 and $11,780,000 for 1927

CHICAGO STOCK PRICES STEADY IN DULL TRADING

Bendix Dividend Meeting Postponed to May 23.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Prices held steady as trading on the Chicago exchange continued yesterday at a reduced rate. With the New York tape moving at the slowest pace in several years there was little incentive for speculators here to enter the market. The extremely narrow price range reduced the short turn operations of the professional traders to a minimum.

Interest in the motor accessory group perked up somewhat as first quarter earnings reports began to come out. Borg Warner slipped off to a new low price of 6¼ following issuance of its statement showing net equivalent to 9 cents a share in the first three months of the year. The final quotation represented slight improvement over the day's low figure.

Postpone Bendix Action.

The trade in Bendix was small and price slightly better. The meeting of directors scheduled yesterday for dividend action has been postponed until May 23, at which time it is expected the quarterly earnings report will be made. While no estimate of earnings has been made by officials, it is understood that first quarter operations resulted in a profit. Operating economies saving $75,000 monthly have been effected and it is said that this will be increased to $100,000 next month.

A strong undertone was again apparent in Commonwealth Edison yesterday as the issue accumulated another fraction to close at 72. Trade fell barely short of 2,000 shares. From the dollar and cents standpoint, the turnover in this stock was the biggest for the day.

Selling in Swift.

Liquidation which appeared to be of necessitous character appeared in Swift & Co. shares, and the price dipped to 14¾ before buying support came into the market. This demand lifted the price back to 15 after nearly 3,850 shares had been traded. It was the heaviest turnover in Swift in several weeks.

Hall Printing was up a fraction as the selling pressure against which the stock has moved recently gave evidence of lifting. The source of the recent offering in this stock is not known.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 8,000; hogs, 25,000; sheep, 14,000.

After Saturday's drubbing it took the hog market a long time to come to life yesterday, but when it finally commenced to stir a stronger tone was in evidence and sales toward midday developed slightly higher.

The extreme top moved up 10 cents to $4.00, while the general average showed 5 cents gain at $3.70. However, prevailing quotations are still 5@15c lower than last Friday's market. The change in time which made some eastern orders an hour late was partly responsible for the slower opening. Local houses hung back at the start, anticipating another draggy trade, but when eastern representatives showed up with fair sized orders some competition developed for top classes.

Quality was poorest of the season for Monday and few of the 4,000 left at the close graded better than fair. Pigs and under weights, which suffered most on last week's break, met good demand yesterday and in some instances sold 15@25 cents above Saturday's quotations.

The hog futures trade was practically lifeless. A bid of $4.25 was posted for May flight, while September heavy grades were made available at $5.25.

Cattle Prices Suffer Too.

Cattle came under pressure again yesterday and prices headed downward right from the start. Prices were lowest for Monday in more than ten years, poorer quality accounting for some of the reduction. Losses of 10@25 cents were registered in most sales of beef cattle, although common to medium grades in some instances were off more. Eastern demand for cattle has been unusually light, due partly to several Jewish holidays. Outsiders bought only 6,985 head last week, the lightest shipments of slaughter stock this season.

Normally shippers buy about 10,000 head a week for eastern slaughter. Yesterday's break carried the top quotation down to $7.75 paid for the best weighty steers offered. The bulk of steers of beef merit sold at $5.50@7.50, only a small share of inferior stock going below $5.00. Butcher stock sold steady to lower, most cows at $3.25@4.25, with prime smooth offerings at $4.50@5.00. Calves ruled strong to 25 cents higher.

Matured Sheep Lower.

Buyers slashed quotations for aged sheep again yesterday, bringing old ewe prices to the lowest levels since last summer. Sales showed a $1.00@1.50 decline compared with two weeks ago. Poor quality lambs and old mutton sheep are feeling the influence of Texas stock, which is moving in volume. Best grades of aged ewes sold yesterday at $2.50@2.75. Bulk of lambs held their ground for the first time in several days, although the peak price reached a new low of $6.90. Most good grades sold at $6.00@6.50. Shorn lambs sold at $6.40 and native springers brought $8.00@8.50.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 8,000 cattle, 25,000 hogs, and 14,000 sheep, against 6,227 cattle, 24,134 hogs, and 14,082 sheep the previous Tuesday and 10,049 cattle, 21,750 hogs, and 22,301 sheep a year ago.

SMALL TRADE IN LARD

Trade in lard was small and largely in May, with only a limited range. The May was offered freely all day, which had an easing effect on the deferred deliveries. The close was at net gains of 2¼c. Hog prices were generally higher, with receipts materially under the previous week's. Liverpool lard was unchanged. The week's exports of lard were 7,656,000 lbs., against 10,663,000 lbs last year. Of bacon they were 1,668,000 lbs, against 3,775,000 lbs last year. Futures on bellies closed unchanged. Cash lard was $4.32½c; loose, 7.75c, and leaf lard, 4.00c. Short ribs and bellies were 4.53½c. RAIN REVEALS WHEAT LOSSES DUE TO FREEZE

Day's Trading Advances Prices After Dip.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Fairly general rains were reported over the agricultural sections of the country during the week-end, but failed to have the slightest effect on the wheat market. Instead there was a resumption of the damage reports from the west and southwest, for the recent moisture is showing up the poor stand of winter wheat over a wide area, and the effect of the March freeze is becoming more apparent.

The character of the crop reports was such as to cause some of the local professionals to take the buying side of wheat and while there was a small dip early, the close was at the top with net gains of 1@1¼c with May at 56⅞@57c, old July, 59¼@59¾c, and September, 62⅛@62¼c. An oversold condition was disclosed on the way up with the advanced checked by selling against offers.

Heavy Loss in Nebraska.

Taken in all, the trade regarded the wheat market as having given an excellent account of itself. The Nebraska midmonth crop report attracted considerable attention from the trade as it suggested a loss of 37 per cent of the 3,042,000 acres seeded last fall, and would be the heaviest abandonment since 1917 when the loss was 75 per cent. Condition was placed at 72, compared with 89 a month ago, and 96 last year.

R. O. Cromwell, the Lamson Bros. & Co. crop observer who covered parts of Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas during the last few days, found spotted conditions of wheat prevailing, the condition of wheat ranging from poor to fairly good. Dust storms were reported in the Dodge City, Kan., area and claimed damage in the western section of that state was irreparable. The trade both here and in Winnipeg paid little attention to the further excellent rain which fell in the spring wheat area both sides of the international line. Light frost was predicted overnight in both Kansas and Nebraska.

Stone Denies Trade Rumor.

Reports were in circulation yesterday to the effect that the farm board was considering having the general grain trade dispose of the remainder of the government's holdings of cash wheat. However, late in the day Chairman Stone of the farm board issued a general denial of the reports and said the board would continue to sell its wheat as heretofore. He was quoted as claiming hearsay evidence of a general world's scarcity developing which would permit of the sale of the grain abroad to good advantage.

Liquidation in Corn.

Scattered longs in May corn started to liquidate yesterday and found support lacking for a time. The nearby delivery dropped ½c to 31½c and a new low on the crop, coming within ⅜c of the inside figure of October 1899. July also dipped to a new low. Buying of May and selling of the distant futures were in evidence, and toward the last there was short covering on the strength in wheat. The finish was unchanged to ¼c higher with May at 32c; July, 35¼@35¾c, and September, 37⅜c. Trading started in December for the season at 38c and closed at 38⅝c.

There was a marked improvement in the shipping demand for cash corn with sales of 114,000 bu and charters were made for 115,000 bu to Georgian Bay. The country sold 47,000 bu to arrive. A decrease of 377,000 bu was shown in the visible with stocks 21,155,000 bu against 17,778,000 bu last year. According to a private Buenos Aires cable the Argentine exportable surplus for the 1932-'33 season is around 200,000,000 bu or about half of that of the previous season.

New Low on Oats.

All deliveries of oats dropped to a new low for the season as the result of a wave of scattered liquidation. The selling movement carried prices off around 1c from Saturday's finish with May and July selling at 21½c, the former coming within ⅛c of the inside figure of May, 1900. Cash houses took the buying side on the decline and with the assistance of commission houses the market rallied sharply, and closed unchanged to ⅛c lower. May was 22⅜c; July, 22⅝c and September, 23¼c at the last.

Rye weakened in sympathy with wheat early, and sold at a new low on the current movement and since last December, May toughing 39⅞c Short covering and local buying on the rally in wheat caused partial recovery with the finish ⅛@⅜c lower. May was 41c; July, 43⅛c, and September, 45¼c at the last.

EGG FUTURES FIRM

Butter and egg futures gained fractionally in a very quiet trading session on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Eggs were unchanged to ⅛c higher, and butter up ⅛@¼c. Support was moderate in October eggs price moving up slightly on new buying. The better tone to egg statistics continued, but failed to encourage buying materially. The four markets showed 11,400 cases less in than last year and receipts were off from last year. Butter was unusually quiet, only one car of November being sold. There was no inclination to enter the market either way, despite relatively favorable statistics. Sales—Butter: 1 car; eggs, 38 cars. Prices follow:
